H-Commital by Court Answers Bar's Beef

The government moved Tuesday to appease critics of its controversal plan for compulsory treatment of heroin addicts by putting the power to commit addicts to the plan into the hands of the court system.

Health Minister Bob McClelland said amendments to the Heroin Treatment Act should satisfy objections raised by the Canadian Bar Association, civil libertarians and doctors throughout the province.

About 100 protestors peacefully paraded in front of the legislature steps Tuesday noon in a demonstration against the heroin act.

The protestors were unable to see McClelland.

"McClelland's proposal is like Hitler's final solution to the Jewish problem," a press release from the committee said.

The amendments change a contentious part of the bill which gave the power of committal to a government-appointed director acting on the recommendation of a panel of experts.

Under the changes, the Supreme Court of B.C. will handle the final commitment order, acting on the recommendation of the director, McClelland said.

The minister said doctors have indicated they were willing to serve on evaluation panels, but were hesitant to commit someone to compulsory treatment.

Legal spokesmen have said the original plan was a denial of due process and was in possible contravention of the Canadian Constitution.

McClelland said those objections should now be erased.

He also explained that if a suspect is deemed to be an addict by the review panel, he may still enter the program voluntarily.

Liberal leader Gordon Gibson and Conservative leader Vic Stephens — who had both stated opposition to the bill in the past — voted late Tuesday along with the government majority to give approval in principle to the bill by a margin of 28 to 16.

However, the NDP voted against second reading, saying the amendments do nothing to change the main impetus of the bill, which is to force addicts to undergo treatment, something the party says will be a costly failure.

But McClelland says the government had little choice but to go ahead with the plan, as all other attempts to control the province's burgeoning heroin addict population have failed.

Cambodia Initiative Reported

BANGKOK (AP) — Vietnamese forces using tanks and planes have launched a new push into neighboring Cambodia and may have penetrated up to 60 kilometres into the territory of its onetime Communist ally, Thai and U.S. military analysts said today.

The sources were uncertain whether the operation — said to involve as many as 70,000 Vietnamese troops on both sides of the border — was aimed at eliminating Cambodian frontier bases or bringing down the government in Phnom Penh.

Thai military sources said a Vietnamese move against Kampong Cham would signal that the operation was aimed at more than sweeping the border.

Northern Gas Pipe Start Possible By 1979

CALGARY (CP) — Construction of the $10-billion Alaska Highway natural-gas pipeline could begin as early as 1979 or 1980 if the projects' proponents get their way, Mitchell Sharp, northern pipeline agency commissioner, said Tuesday.

The agency is to co-ordinate construction of the pipeline through Canada, setting both terms and conditions of construction.

The multi-billion dollar project is expected to give a sharp boost to the Canadian economy and to help lower the high Canadian unemployment rate.

Sharp told a news conference that construction on the massive project might begin before the 1981 target date if "everything went as the people sponsoring the project wanted them to."

Foothills Pipelines Ltd. of Calgary is proposing to build the Canadian portion of the pipeline, which would carry natural gas from Alaska to the lower 48 states.

Last week, Graham Pollock, executive president of Foothills (South Yukon) Ltd., said there might be a delay of between three and four months in the start of construction of the 5,900-kilometre (3,685-mile) pipeline.

He said Foothills originally planned to start construction Jan. 1, 1981, but that date might be postponed to April or May.

But Sharp said he feels the agency must allow the project to proceed without undue delay.

Sharp said the agency will hold public hearings this fall in several northern communities. "They will be hearings, not an inquiry like justice (Thomas) Berger held," he said.

Berger, a justice of the B.C. Supreme Court, conducted his inquiry for two years throughout the Mackenzie River Valley, then held sessions across Canada.

Berger recommended no gas pipeline be built across the Mackenzie Delta for 10 years until native land claims were settled.

Sharp said the hearings would allow northerners to express their views on terms and conditions placed on the pipeline, but it would not be a forum for land claims.

He said once the pipeline was under construction, the agency might be expected to deal with such claims as damage to traplines but it would not deal with land claims as such.

Sharp said the final draft of terms and conditions governing pipeline construction should be out by January or February, 1979.

PETRO-CANADA QUITS BIDDING

CALGARY (CP) — Petro-Canada announced today it has ended efforts to acquire ownership of Husky Oil Ltd., a United States company with substantial interests in heavy oil deposits near LLoydminster on the Alberta-Saskatchewan border.

The federal oil and gas corporation said in a statement the decision to drop its plans to buy Husky came after it was announced Tuesday that Alberta Gas Trunk Line Co., a Canadian firm, had acquired 35 per cent of Husky's common shares.

The Alberta Gas acquisition gives the Calgary-based company the majority of Husky common shares.

In its statement, Petro-Canada said it originally offered to buy Husky because it wanted to accelerate development of the heavy oil deposits near Lloydminster, on the Alberta-Saskatchewan border.

"With a substantial position now being acqired by a Canadian company sensitive to the underlying motivation of its original announced intentions, Petro-Canada will direct its attentions to other activities of priority," the company said.

Tuesday, Alberta Gas announced that it owned 3.8 million Husky shares. Husky chairman Glenn Neilson and president James Nielson hold about 25 per cent of the company's shares while the Mormon Church has about eight per cent.

CHELMSFORD, England (Reuter) — Fifty persons have been arrested and heroin, cocaine, LSD and cannabis seized.

Chain of Parents Protests Crossing

ABOUT 70 parents and children blocked traffic for about 20 minutes this morning at West Saanich Road and Wallace Drive to protest unsafe conditions for children crossing the intersection on their way to the Brentwood elementary school. The parents have been trying for several months to have a traffic light installed at the intersection. So far, despite petitions, letters and phone calls, nothing has been done. The demonstration started at 8 a.m. and ended after police asked the protestors, who walked in a continuous chain blocking all traffic on both roads, to move on. Pamphlets were handed to motorists asking them to share the parents' concern by writing to Mayor Jean Butler and demanding action. "The municipality, although sympathetic, advises us they have done all they can to expedite matters," the pamphlet reads. "(However), we feel the safety of our children and the public in general cannot be left in jeopardy any longer."

SHIP SPEWS FUEL OIL

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — A fuel tank on a Japanese vessel ruptured and poured out at least 65,000 gallons of heavy fuel oil into the Columbia River this morning, the Coast Guard said.

The motor vessel Toyota Maru No. 10, an auto carrier, was taken to Terminal 6 on the Columbia as officials attempted to stem the ruptured tank, which still was leaking about 4,000 gallons an hour this morning, the Coast Guard reported.

The oil slick extended about 45 kilometres down the Columbia from Kelly Point, the Coast Guard said.

COLA Trips Beer Talks

Contract talks between B.C. breweries and union employees broke off Tuesday after the two sides couldn't agree on a cost-of-living allowance (COLA) clause.

A spokesman for the Canadian Union of United Brewery, Flour, Cereal, Soft Drink and Distillery Workers said no future talks have been set, and the next move is up to the companies.

John Langley said the union will take the latest offer by the Brewery Employers Labor Relations Association to the membership at Molson's Vancouver brewery for a vote, but added the negotiating committee is recommending rejection.

The association said in a statement it presented the union with two new offers Tuesday which represent the highest wages and working conditions in the North American brewing industry.

It said that one and two-year offers made in negotiations would mean a $9.58 per hour basic wage for a machine operator on ratification of a contract, increasing to $10.05 on April 1, 1979.

In addition, the companies offered a lump-sum cost-of-living allowance payment to all regular employees and other improvments to existing wages and benfits.

The union has been on strike against Carling O'Keefe in Vancouver since last month. It was locked out at Molson's, Labatt's in New Westminster and Victoria, as well as the Columbia brewery in Creston June 8.

Meanwhile, a picket outside Labatt's New Westminster brewery was jumped by guard dogs Tuesday night.

New Westminster police said the dogs, guarding a warehouse full of beer at the brewery, went after Jordon Blatter, 29, of Maple Ridge. Blatter's injuries were slight and he returned to the line after receiving a tetanus shot in hospital, police said.

Goyer: Ici On Parle Francais

OTTAWA (CP) — Ottawa civil servants working in nearby Hull, Que., should speak French to local merchants and citizens, says Supply and Services Minister Jean-Pierre Goyer.

Speaking Tuesday at the official opening of Place du Portage Phase III, Goyer told several thousand of his department's employees that now that they are working on the Quebec side of the Ottawa River they should do as the Quebecois do.

"The majority of the people here are expecting that we speak French to them and if we make an effort it will show that this region really is a bilingual national capital area that can set an example for the rest of the country."

Goyer spoke in French.

TWO MEN DROWN IN SHAWNIGAN LAKE

A 28-year-old Colwood man died Tuesday in an unsuccessful bid to save a companion from drowning in Shawnigan Lake.

The bodies of Dwayne Donald Forrest, of 2582 Wentwich, and Robin Lintott-Dyck, 26, of St. Charles Apartments, Gorge Road, Victoria, were found by police divers in 15 feet of water about 40 feet off-shore.

A Shawnigan Lake RCMP spokesman said the pair and another man, James Walker, 23, of Cobble Hill, were spending the day at a cottage on the west arm of the lake near 2715 West Shawnigan Lake Road.

The tragedy occurred when Lintott-Dyck went swimming about 4:30 p.m. and got into difficulty.

He called for help and Forrest, despite being a poor swimmer, went to his aid. But as Forrest reached him, Lintott-Dyck went under and was lost from sight.

Walker, who is also a poor swimmer, attempted to help but had to turn back to shore.

Walker told police Forrest stayed in the water, and when he next looked, Forrest also had disappeared.

Walker used a boat in an unsuccessful search then returned to get help.

Police divers located the bodies at 6:40 p.m.

"No one could fault the men for their bravery," he said. "But none of them were very good swimmers and I think it was a case of lack of respect for water.

150 Homeless as Tornado Stabs Que. Village

BUCKINGHAM, Que. (CP) — Mayor Reginald Scullion has declared a state of emergency for the Buckingham-Masson area hit by a tornado that injured 36 people and left more than 150 homeless Tuesday.

Scullion said he will seek federal and provincial aid for residents for what some have estimated is $2 million in damage.

"This is an emergency, there's no doubt about it," he said. "The area has been hit by the worst disaster we've ever seen."

Scullion said he is concerned that insurance may not cover "an act of God like this."

The injuries were minor — ranging from broken bones to cuts and shock.

The storm wiped out 40 homes in a new subdivision and damaged 25 other homes in the Masson village district of this pulp-and-paper town of 2,000 about 30 kilometres northeast of Ottawa.

One resident said "everything went grey" about five minutes before the storm hit at about 5:15 p.m.

Police said there was some advance notice of the storm and local radio stations carried warnings, so many residents headed to their basements. But others were trapped between collapsed walls.

The injured were taken to hospital in central Buckingham, about five kilometres away from where the storm hit the hardest. Doctors arrived from outlying areas to help treat the victims.

Some of the homeless were put up in a local hockey arena, the town hall and the local branch of the Royal Canadian Legion.

Wayne Ouellette, 25, a paperworker, described how the storm hit his neighborhood.

"My wife and I had just finished supper when the wind started," he said. "I got up to close the window but before I could, the glass shattered all over me."

"I ran upstairs to close the windows up there and when I looked out I saw two houses start to fall down.

"I saw two cars flying through the air and one of them landed on a house."

Ouellette said his house was one of the least damaged, "so a lot of the neighbors came over here."

"I didn't want to leave," said Ouellette. "It's not that I don't trust the people of Masson, but I've got a lot of good furniture there"

Police were cruising the damaged areas late Tuesday, watching for looters.

Hours after the destruction, in muggy, post-storm weather, the town centre was crowded with townsfolks and outsiders.

Officials estimated the wind reached speeds of 180 kilometres an hour.

A hurricane is a storm with winds gusting over 120 kilometres an hour. A tornado has even stronger winds and causes more damage.

The damage was confined to two areas, one about five blocks square and the other smaller.

Library Stays Put?

Plans for a new central library for Greater Victoria may be abandoned because of increased property taxes and a lack of financial incentive from the provincial government.

Library board chairman Victoria Ald. Murray Glazier said today the proposal to move the library is in jeopardy because of the current economic situation and the desire of municipalities to show financial restraint.

Glazier said the plans to move the central library from Yates and Blanshard to space in a new provincial government building on Broughton were going ahead full speed until recently.

But drastically increased property taxes and a provincial grant scheme that provided no incentive for the move now threaten the project.

Glazier said tax hikes have made councils reluctant to enter into any new major projects, and in addition the new provincial grant formula means the library will get almost the entire $100,000 promised by the government even without moving.

If the library stays put it will receive $77,000 in grants from the government. A move would bring in only an additional $23,000 and at the same time cost taxpayers $485,000 a year.

"The new grants will apply to the old building as well as to the new one so there's just no incentive," said Glazier.

He added, however, that the proposed move was not dead yet as the councils of Victoria, Saanich, Oak Bay and Esquimalt have to vote individually on the matter.

Glazier said he doesn't believe councils will support the move.

"I think the outcome is predictable."

Glazier said that because the central library is a new project it's likely to get the axe, while other less popular facilities that have been getting funding for years will continue to do so simply because they are established.

2,4-D Decision Soon

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Supreme Court Tuesday let stand an injunction against the use of the herbicide 2,4-D to control Eurasian milfoil in the Okanagan Lakes.

Following a day of legal arguments between lawyers for the provincial government and environmental groups, Justice A. B. Macfarlane said he will rule "in the next day or two" on the legality of permits to apply the chemical.

Environment Minister Jim Nielsen warned the delay will have a negative effect on the program because scientists fear it will not be effective if the weed is allowed to continue to grow.

"Every day going by adds further growth to the weed and makes it more difficult to control them," said Neilsen. He said the last week has been critical "because the weather is right and its the time of year when they (weeds) are moving very quickly."

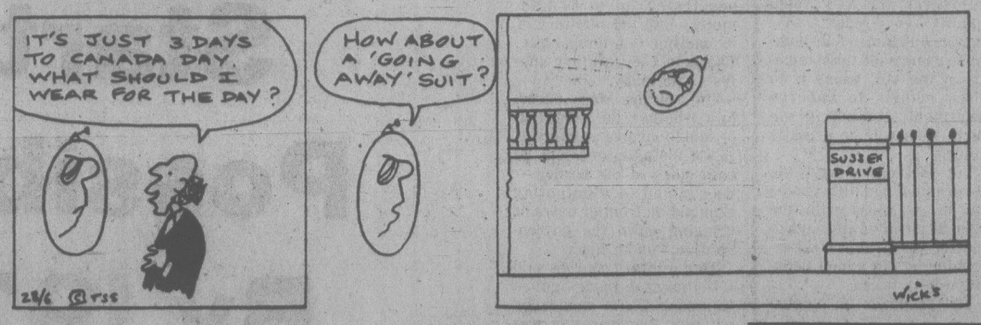

The minister said he thought the program could still go ahead this summer if the court allows it to. "How effective it will be is really open to conjecture at the moment," he added.

Justice Macfarlane earlier rejected a request by G. P. Macdonald, a ministry of environment lawyer, to lift an injunction against use of 2,4-D while the court decides the issue.

Macdonald said that if aquatic plant management control personnel are stopped from applying herbicide to weed-infested areas, "irreparable harm" could be done to both cottage owners and the tourist industry.

The injunction, granted last week by the court, covers permits to apply the chemical to Okanagan, Kamlamalka and Skaha Lakes, all in the B.C. Interior.

NEY TIED ON MUZZLE

Capt. Creston Ketchum of Gabriola Island, hired as master of the provincial government's 100-foot schooner Freelance that grounded on a coral reef in the Caribbean June 13, said today his official report of the incident is now in the hands of Dr. Philip Ney, of the Quest Star Society.

Ketchum said he when contacted by the Times on Tuesday that he did not make it clear that it was Ney, not the provincial government, that had ordered him not to give out any information on the grounding.

He said he had no idea when he arrived in Antigua that the Freelance was a government ship.

"My principal was the Quest Star Society," he said.

Recreation and Conservation Minister Sam Bawlf had made arrangements with Ney to have the society purchase the vessel with provincial lottery funds and bring her to Victoria, where she would have been officially handed over to the government.

The society was to have operated her on an outward bound-type of program for B.C. youngsters.

Ney could not be reached today to determine whether or not the report will be made public.

Canadians have access to some of the largest recreational territory of any nation on earth. Logging roads make lakes, rivers and millions of acres of wilderness available to campers, hikers, hunters, and fishermen. Recently logged areas often provide young growth for teeming wildlife, like moose, deer.

Moose love us

Not to mention deer, partridge, rabbits, grosbeaks, etc. A mature evergreen forest holds little nourishment for wildlife. When the forest is harvested for pulp and papermaking, new tender growth usually springs up, attracting wild creatures galore. Canadians enjoy the benefits of the harvest—the pulp and paper industry provides more jobs than any other. And the next crop of trees will be harvested by our grandchildren.

There is no pretending that a freshly harvested timber tract is a thing of beauty.

Fortunately, nature abhors a vacancy in the forest. In most forest areas across Canada, soon after harvesting, a surprising variety of new growth springs up. Poplar, birch, maples, alders, as well as seedlings of the conifers—spruce, pine, hemlock and fir.

Deer, moose, small animals and birds relish this lively undergrowth. Harvesting is sometimes followed by a mini population explosion of birds and beasts.

But sometimes the forest does not manage to reproduce itself. Time for reforestation.

Reforestation

The variety of ways to plant new forest crops is as varied as Canada's weather and landscape: seeds are dropped from planes and helicopters or seedlings from vast tree nurseries are planted one by one, the way you'd plant tomatoes.

The prime responsibility for reforestation rests with our provincial governments, custodians of public forest land. (Only 11% of forest land is privately owned).

On publicly owned land, all wood is measured for government audit and paid for by industry. The money the pulp and paper people pay is called "stumpage". Last year the industry paid the Canadian people, through their provincial governments, more than $110 million. A portion of the "stumpage" is earmarked to pay for assuring the next crop of timber for future generations.

Pulp and paper companies work with provincial government forestry departments in reforestation. They know the land intimately, the way a farmer knows which of his fields are best for corn and which for grazing.

Provincial nurseries often supply the millions of seedlings for reforestation. Some provinces offer seedlings to private citizens. Thousands of acres of land that is useless for farming will produce a healthy crop of trees. Write or phone your provincial department responsible for forestry to learn the specifics. Your plantation of seedlings could grow into an inheritance for your children or grandchildren.

Fire wastes our birthright. Provinces protect our forests from destructive flames with air patrols, water and chemical bombing. Logging roads take firefighters to the scene quickly.

Logging roads open up Canada's wilderness.

To get into the forest, the pulp and paper industry builds roads. The network of roads into the woodlands adds up to more than 12,000 miles—nearly three times the length of the Trans-Canada highway.

Road building costs are staggering—from $10,000 to $125,000 per mile. Keeping them in shape adds further cost. Besides bringing wood to the mills, these forest roads are essential for fire-fighting.

Camping, hiking for nature lovers.

Few countries in the world have so much of their wild, unpopulated open spaces available for recreational use as Canada.

Campers, hikers, hunters, fishermen have the pleasure of millions of acres of once inaccessible wilderness thanks to the logging roads built and kept open by the pulp and paper industry.

Today, Canadian tourists are urged to spend their travelling money at home. Canada's wilderness offers them attractions that surpass the fondest dreams of most nature-loving Europeans.

Many provincial governments and pulp and paper companies supply maps showing driveable roads into the forests. Some have created nature trails and camping facilities for popular enjoyment.

Forest Management

In our forests, covering a third of the total area of our country, is our greatest natural resource. When oil and gas have ended, our forests will still be growing. And as long as people around the world use newspapers, books, packages, our forests will create jobs.

The forest, along with the manufacturing and service industries that depend on it, supports one out of ten Canadian jobs.

Pulp and papermaking itself pays almost five times as much in salaries and wages as the oil refiners. It pays out almost twice as much as car building and a third more than the iron and steel mills.

Investigators Find Bird Remains On Runway

TORONTO (CP) — A Transport Canada spokesman says one of the engines on the Air Canada DC-9 that crashed Monday at Toronto International Airport was damaged and the remains of a bird were found on the runway.

Jack Shelton said Tuesday it is not known what caused the damage or whether the bird was sucked into the engine. He said it would be premature to conclude that the aircraft crashed because of a collision with a bird.

The plane was bound for Winnipeg and Vancouver when it crashed into a gully after an aborted takeoff attempt, killing two passengers and injuring the other 105.

Mary Helen Scrase, 71, of 640 Dallas, is still listed in critical condition at Etobicoke General Hospital. She was reported suffering from facial damage and a broken knee as a result of the accident.

Her husband, Frank, 75, a retired accountant, was one of the two persons killed Monday. The other was Irwin Theodore Childs, 43, a United States citizen living in Toronto with his wife and six children.

There were 63 persons in nine Metropolitan Toronto hospitals late Tuesday being treated for injuries suffered in the accident. Eleven are in serious condition or in intensive-care units.

Dr. Thomas Daglish, the regional coroner, said he is not sure whether an inquest will be held.

Shelton estimated it would be at least a week before the investigation is complete.

On Tuesday at the crash site, members of the federal ministry of transport removed the right Pratt and Whitney engine from the rear fuselage of the aircraft.

The left engine will be taken off today, said Shelton.

A 15-member team of aviation safety investigators also will be examining why the pilot, Reginald Stewart of Toronto, aborted his takeoff.

John Cavill, an Air Canada spokesman, said the pilot and the first officer, Douglas C. Carnegie of Toronto, have been interviewed by airline officials but neither has issued a public statement.

The flight recorder was recovered from the cockpit Tuesday by Transport Canada officials and flown to the National Research Council in Ottawa for examination, Cavill said.

Earliest reports said the takeoff was aborted because of an engine failure. Other reports said a tire blew before the fully-loaded aircraft had sufficient speed to leave the ground.

"We don't even know for sure what speed the aircraft was travelling at," said John Wardall, an Air Canada official.

The aircraft and any fragments will be x-rayed for structural failures and results of the x-rays will be compared with information in the flight recorder.

Damage Writs Filed

CASTLEGAR, B.C. (CP) — Lawyer Mickey Moran has filed writs for seven estates which claim unspecified damages as a result of the Feb. 11 crash of a Pacific Western Airlines jet at Cranbrook, in which 43 persons were called.

Moran said the writs seek damages against Cranbrook and PWA.

The actions were filed despite the federal government's decision to join a fund to compensate victims before liability is settled.

Fatality Figures Advocate Belts

If you are between 16 and 25, drink, drive between midnight and 2 a.m. and don't wear a seatbelt, you're pushing to the limit your chances of survival on B.C.'s highways.

In the 12 months preceding compulsory seatbelt laws, 722 people died on B.C. roads with alcohol playing a role in at least half and possibly three-quarters of the deaths.

Almost 90 per cent of the victims were not wearing seatbelts and about 40 per cent were between the ages of 16 and 25.

In almost half of the alcohol-related deaths, or 25 per cent over-all, blood alcohol levels were at least .08 per cent — the level of legal impairment in B.C.

In a further 25 per cent of the accidents, alcohol was either suspected of playing a role or not enough information was obtained, leaving fewer than 25 per cent of the fatalities where alcohol was not reported to be a consideration.

Of the 722 deaths between Nov. 1 1976 and Oct. 31, 1977 547 — an increase of 17 per cent over the preceding 12 months — occurred on provincial highways. The latter figure formed the basis for the statistical information released this week by the highways ministry.

The other deaths occurred on city streets and were not included in the report.

Excessive speed was a factor in 31 per cent of the highway deaths, and in cases where statistics are available (430 deaths) 88 per cent were not using seatbelts.

Of the belted victims, 60 per cent were using lap belts only with 40 per cent (or 21 deaths over-all) using shoulder harnesses.

In at least 30 per cent of the deaths victims were thrown from the car.

Saturday is the most dangerous day of the week to drive, followed by Sunday. May and August are the most dangerous months.

Although peak travel volumes occur between 3 and 5 p.m., most fatalities occurred between 6 and 7 p.m. and midnight and 2 a.m.

In just over 50 per cent of highway fatalities at least one vehicle crossed a directional dividing line or median and was travelling on the wrong side of the road.

Pedestrians, motor cyclists and cyclists accounted for 15 per cent of the fatalities.

'FAIR' STEEL PRICES VOWED

VANCOUVER (CP) — Justice Minister Ron Basford said Tuesday that construction steel will be delivered here at "fair international prices."

Basford's comments came after the federal government announced that a four-month remission of duties on steel imported into British Columbia, Alberta, Newfoundland and the Yukon will end Friday.

However, Basford said the duty won't necessarily be the same as the 30-per-cent anti-dumping duty imposed last September on wide-flange steel beams imported into all but those four areas. Federal officials are still figuring out the duty, said Basford.

"I can't tell you whether there will be a dumping duty or not," he said. "Whether there is a duty depends on what is determined are the fair international prices."

He said world steel prices are currently in a state of flux and the United States may soon be increasing prices.

Spokesmen in the B.C. steel fabricating industry have said that a 30-per-cent duty could mean the loss of up to 2,000 jobs, but Basford said no jobs should be lost if the industry can operate using steel imported at the "fair international prices."

The anti-dumping duties imposed last fall have been charged, but importers have been able to get their money back by applying to the federal government.

Foreign Aid 'Stolen'

COBOURG, Ont. (CP) — A Canadian missionary who returned recently from Zaire says much of the foreign aid sent to the African country is stolen before it reaches its destination.

Robert Watts, 20, of Cobourg recently spent seven months in Zaire helping to set up children's educational classes with the Bahai religious group.

An example of the corruption involved an incident in which his mission once brought nine tons of supplies to Zaire, fastened together with metal and bolts.

By the time the supplies reached the interior provinces by train and boat, they had dwindled to only 500 pounds, he said in an interview Tuesday.

He also said hospitals and qualified doctors are available throughout Zaire but that there is no medicine to treat disease.

John De Bondt, a spokesman for the Canadian International Development Agency, said Tuesday that Canada has supplied $22.9 million in foreign aid to Zaire in the last 10 years.

He said some things occasionally go astray, but that no system is perfect.

Muzorewa's Aides Killed

SALISBURY (AP) — As U.S. and British envoys were winding up a new and apparently futile peace mission in Rhodesia, four of Bishop Abel Muzorewa's aides were reported slain after seeking a meeting with guerrillas fighting to supplant the bi-racial Rhodesian governmment.

The military command reported 39 other recent deaths in the fighting.

There was no immediate indication who might have been responsible for the killing of the bishop's envoys, reported a month after four aides of Rev. Ndabaningi Sithole were shot and killed while putting up pro-government placards 115 kilometres east of Salisbury.

Muzorewa, Sithole and a third black nationalist leader, Chief Jeremiah Chirau, jointly head a transition government with Prime Minister Ian Smith to steer the county to black rule by the beginning of next year.

The two leaders of the guerrillas, Joshua Nkomo and Robert Mugabe, were excluded from the March settlement agreement and have vowed to wreck the country's first universal-suffrage elections due in the next few months and to bring down the government.

Muzorewa's four aides were slain last week "trying to bring peace," Stanlake Samkange, a spokesman for the Bishop's United African National Council, said Tuesday. He gave no other details, but council sources said guerrillas killed them in southeast Rhodesia.

The three black leaders in the government have been seeking in vain to arrange peace talks with some of the estimated 6,000 guerrillas operating in the country from bases in neighboring Botswana, Mozambique and Zambia.

Meanwhile, the U.S. ambassador to Zambia, Stephen Low, and John Graham of the British foreign office were leaving Salisbury today after six days of talks in an apparently unsuccessful attempt to bring the Rhodesian leaders and the guerrilla chiefs closer together.

Among the latest casualties reported by the military command were a farmer and seven members of his family it said were shot and then thrown into a blazing hut.

House of the Federation

Just what kind of strange beast is this House of the Federation proposed by Prime Minister Trudeau?

This new-look Senate, first of all, would be based on proportional representation — an electoral device common enough in Europe but unknown here in federal and provincial politics. It ensures that even small parties which would not get enough votes to win any one constituency might have a total percentage of support nationwide sufficient to warrant so many members in a political body.

Given Canada's basic three-and-a-half party system, it also ensures that no single party will ever have a majority in the House of the Federation and there could be perpetual deadlock. On the other hand, it might lead to the formation of coalitions and alliances which cross party and ideological lines to support single issues, as in the American House of Representatives, and that would be no bad thing in this fractured nation.

It would call for a different style of politics and leadership than that employed now in the House of Commons, where the whips merely crowd everyone into line and tell them to shut up and vote the party line.

Half of the 118 "feds" would be chosen by the federal cabinet (actually 60, since Ottawa would also name the two members for the Yukon and Northwest Territories) and half by the provincial legislatures (not the provincial cabinets, it should be noted) after each general election, according to the popular vote totals of each party.

Today, the lineup, by our calculations, would be Conservatives 39, Liberals 37, NDP 23, Social Credit-Creditiste 10, Parti Quebecois 5, Union Nationale 2, Liberal Reform (Nfld.) 1.

A few points are obvious: the New Democratic Party would hold the balance of power. Barring its complete disappearance from Canadian politics, it would always hold the balance of power, since in four Canadian provinces it consistently gets 30 to 40 per cent of the vote (its strength is slowly growing in other provinces, like Nova Scotia and Newfoundland, so its membership in the HoF would increase over the years) and in federal elections takes about 20 per cent.

The Liberals have fewer members than the Conservatives because they control so few provincial legislatures, and are so unpopular in the west.

The list of "party standings" above also assumes that there would be some form of party discipline in the HoF, which may be too great an assumption to make for a body consisting of so many diverse splinters. Would the 22 Liberal "feds" appointed by the Trudeau cabinet sit down in caucus with the four Liberal "feds" appointed each by the Ontario and Quebec legislatures? Would Alberta's three Tories ever agree with Ontario's four Conservatives on energy policy, language legislation and other matters?

What of the Parti Quebecois, which has pledged before to boycott federal politics? And to whom would the Social Credit 10 attach themselves? A pragmatic, basically conservative B.C. Socred would be mighty uncomfortable sitting next to a backwoods fundamentalist Quebec Creditiste.

Another important distinction is that the composition of the House of the Federation would be glacially slow in changing. Those who joke about the need to install revolving doors in the red chamber, who call the new body a house of transients, have evidently not attempted to figure out its composition using actual election results. For example, in the 1974 federal election, the Liberals went from a minority to a comfortable majority in the House of Commons and the Tories dropped from a near-tie with the Grits to a lower spot. The NDP lost seats.

But there would have been no change at all in the major parties' representation in the House of Federation, since their popular vote percentages remained practically the same. The only change would have been another NDP "fed" and one less Socred.

Another example: the Nov. 15, 1976 election in Quebec was a landslide for the PQ, a dramatic turnaround from its previous position. But the change in Quebec's HoF representation would have been . . . a net increase of one PQ "fed" to a total of five and a reduction of two in the six-member Quebec Liberal contingent.

British Columbia after its upset 1972 election would have named two New Democrats, two Socreds and a Liberal to the HoF — no change from the 1969 election. After the dramatic reversal of the 1975 election? Three Socreds and two New Democrats.

Such calculations demonstrate how surprisingly small shifts in voting support under the parliamentary system can swing major changes in the House of Commons and provincial legislatures, a basic fact of electoral politics that is often overlooked.

The HoF would be a very stable body, its membership changing less frequently than the House of Commons. It is an interesting concept for Canada. Depending upon the quality of people named to it, in the House of the Federation could lie the "reunification" of the country, or its ruin. But it deserves to be tried. Certainly it can be no worse than the Senate we now have.

MAURICE WESTERN

Does Anyone Really Care?

OTTAWA — If Parliament is to give the constitutional amendment bill the attention it deserves, it is difficult to believe that much other important business will be transacted in the ensuing year.

Prime Minister Trudeau's deadlines clearly indicate the government's sense of urgency in these matters. In the prevailing circumstances, however, it is far from clear that this is shared by citizens at large.

Last weekend the Gallup organization published the results of a survey which sought the opinions of persons across Canada on the most important problems confronting us. As constitutional reform is intended primarily to reassure Quebec, the results in that province are of considerable interest.

Of those polled, 55 per cent considered inflation the most serious problem; 33 per cent picked unemployment; only 12 per cent mentioned national unity and Quebec separatism. The latter, as would be expected, was the highest regional figure and contrasted with a low of seven percent in the Atlantic provinces.

Raided Cupboard

It must be the government's view that public interest, now manifestly unsatisfactory, will be rekindled by the extremely complex draft legislation exposed to view last week.

There can be no doubt that the government has fairly ransacked its cupboard of ideas in the effort to transform apathetic citizens into ardent constitutional renewers. Some of the proposed changes are clearly important, which is not to say that they will butter much bread. Some, including name changes, are genuflections to Quebec mythology. Others have to do with gloriously unimportant details.

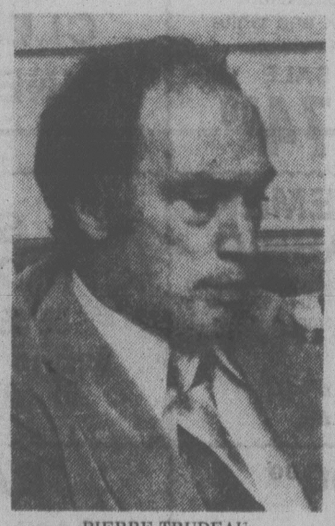

The government may be at a loss to say what a member of the upper House shall henceforth be called but at least it is to be inscribed in our fundamental law that anyone now entitled to write P.C. after his name will henceforth be a C.S. and, we must all hope, a better man for it.

The prime minister has been dedicated, from the outset, to two ideas. He has sought to entrench rights, especially language rights, in the constitution. This, in his view, will do more than anything else to promote unity by reconciling the francophone minority to federalism. He has also sought a more efficient parliament, contrasting our time-consuming procedures unfavorably with those developed at Westminster, reforming closure rules and so on.

How will these ideas be furthered by the proposed new constitution?

In the matter of linguistic rights, Trudeau has certainly devised protections undreamed of in most earlier discussions. The language provisions will be entrenched gradually by the "opting in" process and may thus come to apply eventually even in hitherto hostile Quebec. But this is only the beginning of it.

In the oddly named House of the Federation, a double majority principle (adapted possibly from pre-Confederation Canada) is to apply. For voting purposes a French-speaking member is constitutionally defined. Nothing is being left to chance; if a person's linguistic identity is open to dispute, he will be correctly classified by Mr. Speaker. No measure of special linguistic "significance" (as indicated by the governor general, certified by either Speaker or determined according to upper House rules) may pass except with the consent of the two majorities. While the House of Commons may have the final word, this would require a two-thirds vote which governments nowadays seldom have at their disposal.

PIERRE TRUDEAU

There are further details, safeguarding the linguistic composition of committees and ensuring double majorities at successive stages, all of which suggest that the proposed constitution would realize Trudeau's central objective.

But what would it do for parliamentary efficiency? As the prime minister himself concedes, it might very well slow the legislative process.

The Senate, as presently consitituted, possesses very wide powers which it is most reluctant to use and rarely uses. This timidity reflects in part a sense of obligation to government, perhaps more importantly a prudent recognition that an appointed chamber has no popular mandate and ought not to oppose itself to the elected chamber.

What is now recommended, however, is a House of the Federation which would have a mandate of sorts since it would be elected indirectly, as was formerly the practice in the Soviet Union. With provincial legislatures returning half the members (Parliament the other half) in accordance with somewhat primitive rules of proportional representation, an anti-government majority would normally be assured. For this reason joy does not reign unconfined in the Liberal caucus; for different reasons, including the pioneering work of Flora Macdonald, it is also restricted in the Conservative caucus.

While the powers of the new chamber will be sharply limited — it is to be given a suspensive veto of 60 to 120 days duration — the temptation to employ the powers will be very strong. For they will be given to it by the will of the popularly elected House, acting in the conviction that the new legislative body should be much more useful, active and visible than its predecessor. In effect, the Feds, if that is to be their title, are being told by the Commons: these are the powers which we think appropriate to your use except in conditions of such urgency that delay would be detrimental to the country.

Why Not Act?

Why would a chamber with a semi-mandate and no particular affection for the federal government hesitate to use powers being entrusted to it? How, indeed, can it be expected to treat them lightly when, as the very centre piece of constitutional reform it is supposed to safeguard all the regions and to accomplish so much for national unity?

In this respect, it would appear therefore that Trudeau has gone into reverse. A parliamentary work slowdown is now seen as a positive development since it will be achieved by a second chamber working in mysterious ways to end our feelings of alienation.

The House of the Federation will impose other speed limitations on the government. In our unreformed state, the government enjoys great freedom in appointments. Henceforth, the Feds will have to approve appointments, not only to the supreme court but also, in the case of chairmen, presidents and chief executives, to judicial, quasi-judicial or administrative bodies and Crown corporations. This principle is, of course, borrowed from the U.S. Senate.

In all this constitutional stuffing, something has been forgotten. There is no mention of the foreign service. The omission will bring immense relief to those who toil in diplomacy for Don Jamieson. Whatever happens at home, it is reassuring to know that our well polished image abroad will not be threatened in future by injudicious words carelessly uttered by some provincial delegate to the House of the Federation.

Doctors' Cards

Why the outcry against Health Minister Bob McClelland's decision for the signed cards by the doctors' patients? No dedicated doctor will be concerned — his integrity is intact, his character and reputation beyond challenge. I have known such men; they exist today in what is perhaps the Stone Age. I became a registered nurse, a postgraduate in surgical nursing, a matron of a 60-bed hospital. Experience rubs off on one down the years, and I am 79 years old.

A proven case in point: recently a patient not agreeing with a diagnosis was referred to a specialist with a six-week delay for appointment. After waiting 40 minutes and after months of continuing pain, the harassed doctor came in, apologized for the waiting, said he had to operate in the next few minutes and gave a cursory three minutes to the patient plus a future appointment in three weeks. The onus was on the patient! Who paid? The patient? The government? Even perhaps the specialist? No notification was given the patient and the suffering continues. One couldn't sign a card in such circumstances. — Kathleen M. Worthington-Lake, 990 Hampshire Road.

McGill Replies

The re-publication in the Victoria Times (May 27) of the article about McGill University (McGill: A Threatened University), which first appeared in the Toronto Star, is a disservice to Times readers and to the newspaper itself.

Schachter, the author of the article, had an interview with me that lasted an hour and a half. Out of that he quoted just four words, and those are out of context. To my knowledge he also interviewed two of our vice-principals, a dean and two professors — one a French Canadian.

Whom did he quote? None of them apparently — preferring this year's president of the students' society and an employee of the students' society type-setting service. And they are both Americans.

It is essential to point out that many Quebecers, both francophone and anglophone, would recognize with distaste an emigre colonialist tone running through the writing. This tone is set by the opening sentence: "McGill, the university that proudly calls itself the Harvard of the North" — a phrase surely identifiable as a journalist cliche and never used by university spokesmen, and by the concluding remarks where the writer would have readers judge McGill's future by the licence plates seen on the campus.

Your sub heading, Losing Rank, is an accurate reflection of the text but not of the facts. Every North American university is facing hard times. Colleges and universities in Canada and the U.S. are losing students; some have closed. Ontario universities have had greater percentage student enrolment losses and budget cuts than McGill. For this reason, some of them are already engaged in determined recruiting in Quebec.

Whether McGill "will no longer rank with the University of Toronto at the top of the list of Canadian eductional institutions" does not arise. McGill is an outstanding Canadian university. It will remain outstanding, in the forefront of academic achievement. We have seen much more adverse circumstances than the present.

To be sure, there are differences between McGill's problems and those of other major Canadian universities. These are certainly based on political and sociological change. It is right that these be publicly examined as they are being examined inside and outside McGill.

Our own staff are among those engaged in this examination, not just of McGill goals but of national goals and aspirations. However, to say that "increasingly the university is finding itself preoccupied with one main reality: Quebec" is to turn a virtue into a fault.

Schachter goes on to say that "McGill's tendency is still to seek links with Harvard and Princeton rather than with the University of Quebec and Laval University." This is simply untrue.

The matter of language has also been turned upside down. French is becoming the language of Quebec. The present government is, from our point of view — and McGill is not alone in this — making excessive demands and we believe some regulations will be modified. However, we have long since dealt with Quebec people and our governments in French.

Measured in terms of financial support, from private sources as well as from government, McGill still has the confidence of Canadians. I am sure that this is justified. — Robert E. Bell, Principal and Vice-Chancellor, McGill University, Montreal.

Gardens or Weeds?

In my opinion Victoria is not a city of gardens, but a city of weeds, uncut boulevards, dusty streets. Oh yes, all springtime they paint the Inner Harbor area, fix up government building grounds and make Douglas and Government Streets pretty — just a shop window front for the tourist.

I am forced to stay one year on business in Victoria and reside in the Gorge Road East area. Gorge Road East from Douglas to Washington Avenue is a disgrace, with uncut grass on the boulevards, which is now three to four feet tall. All the small streets in the same area with small industries and workshops are absolutely shocking and unsightly.

Why doesn't the city make small industries clear up the exterior of their properties? I guess it is because the tourist does not venture in these areas.

I am from Toronto, where most industrial areas are landscaped and a pleasure to behold and never neglected.

This city is also lacking in safety precautions. I observed an open dock area of about 20 feet in length in the Inner Harbor where the new pier is being built in front of the Wax Museum. Any carefree child could have run right off the dock into the harbor. There was no rope, no barrier, nothing to stop such an accident happening. During the recent visit of the tall ships, the same safety precautions were nonexistent. Children four and five years of age sat swinging their legs over an open dock — again no barriers and as usual no police supervision. They were too busy ticketing cars, I guess. I am under the impression the city of Victoria depends on traffic ticket violation revenue for its whole economy.

The western cities are always ready to criticize the city of Toronto but people who live in glass houses should not throw stones.

Victoria is a nice place to visit for a long weekend but I sure would not want to live here, but in all fairness I find its citizens the most pleasant, friendly and well-mannered as anywhere else in Canada. — James Boyd, Etobicoke, Ont.

Work Where Work Is

In the Times of June 22 was a reprint from the Sun, The Freedom To Be Different.

To quote from this article (about the unemployment problem): "Thus, if they do not do what the minister thinks is best for them, he will punish (the unemployed young ones) by depriving them of their freedom of movement and association. And why? Because they are poor."

In the first place, what is wrong to work where work is? It will do most of the young generation a world of good to go into the country to do some pioneering and to work. Canada has been built by the pioneering of earlier generations, which endured privation and hardship beyond present understanding. They have been the creators of our present Canada, its agriculture and its far flung industries. Actually, if these presently unemployed learn how smaller places and the north really are, they will — like myself — fall in love with the beauty and majesty of our land and its many variations.

The unemployed kind are deprived of the opportunity to develop useful skills, to learn as they earn, to get out of the poisoning atmosphere of alcohol and drug addiction as well as — and that is most important — to develop character and the pride which comes with achievement.

Did you ever consider, that these "poor" people are sucking on the tits of society? We deprive them forever to get on their own feet and to be productive and proud members of our society, if directed into the right channels of employment? Is it not depriving them of their liberty to prevent them from becoming self-sufficient??

Not to help them in a positive way is criminal. You can give these people freedom only by making them free of the fetters of having nothing worthwhile to do. With your idea of liberty they are condemned to a life of all kinds of crime and addiction. And they are exposed to all the evil influences of a sick secondary society. Do you really think that is liberty? — J. A. W. v. Heyden, 992 Haliburton Road.

Just a Pittance

If you noted the $1,000 expenditure by the Greater Victoria school district to inform the public of tax costs by the school district, believe me that is just a pittance!

If the school board goes ahead with the suggestion to renovate and turn the supply centre warehouse into office space, the costs will be in the hundreds of thousands of dollars. They have at their disposal at the present time the Paul Building and the addition of the media centre.

Remember the cry of how necessary this media centre was just a couple of years ago, for the use of teachers and the benefit of all students in this school district. Is that no longer the case? If so, what has happened to education? Possibly just another snow job and cost to the taxpayers!

Something is radically wrong with the operation and thinking within this school district. Is it the administration, trustees or both? They are closing schools, cutting back and laying off staff, but can always come up with large expenditures for their own benefit at the expense of us, the average taxpayers.

They must feel that we are in the same classification as they are. High wages and low mentality! Whether they lease the Paul and media centre buildings possibly for their usual $1 per year, the rest of us taxpayers will foot the cost, either to the school taxes or the education department of the provincial government.

I, as one taxpayer, have had enough of their stupidity and lack of planning. — R. Cunningham, 1343 Slater Street.

Go to Kelowna

Because of the manner in which the provincial government has handled the Captain Cook Bicentennial project, your readers would be wise not to visit Nootka this year.

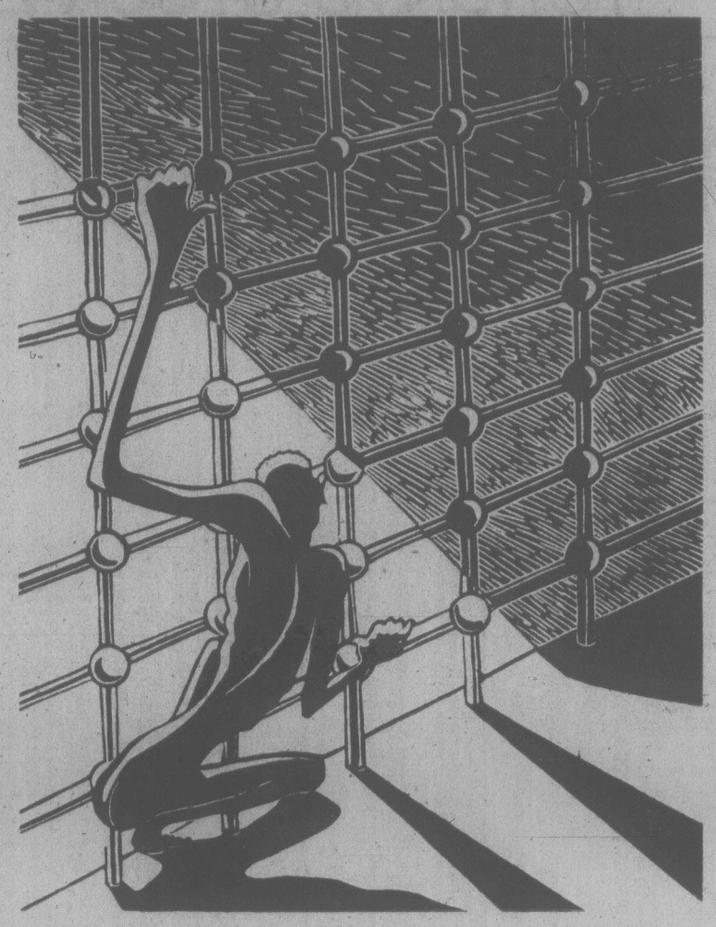

Captain Cook should have made landfall at Kelowna or maybe in the minister of tourism's riding. The natives of this area are not upset about the lack of a grant, but more in the way the whole project was being shoved down their throats.

We operate a small marine station and also supply an emergency towing service along with search and rescue work for the touring boats. Because the provincial government won't come up with some assistance to help carry on and improve this service, I am closing down this operation for this year in respect for Captain Cook and the natives of this area. — David L. Smith, Saavedra Island, Gold River.

South Africa's Island Prison

Surrounded by treacherous seas, exposed to the elements, Robben Island, lying seven miles to the north-west of Cape Town, has for centuries been a place of suffering. It was the Dutch, in the 17th century, who first recognized its potential as a prison: the sea not only kept prisoners from escaping but kept unwanted visitors out. A hundred years earlier their navigators had named it after the seals (robbe) that were the island's first inhabitants.

Today it is a maximum security prison for non-white political prisoners. Patrols ensure that no unauthorized boat passes within a mile of its shores and men who formed the backbone of the liberation movements of South Africa and Namibia inhabit cells in jail blocks said to be impregnable.

At least 40 men are there for life — among them Nelson Mandela, leader of the African National Congress, and Govan Mbeki, to whom the University of Amsterdam in January awarded an honorary doctorate in absentia. Those serving a sentence of 20 years include Herman Ja Toivo, Namibian leader, while Robert Sobukwe — Pan Africanist Congress leader who recently died of cancer — was at one time detained without trial on the island. The latest arrivals to join the several hundreds already serving sentences include students from the Soweto uprising and other members of the Black Consciousness Movement.

Only men are held on the island. Black women political prisoners are usually in Kroonstad, 110 miles south of Johannesburg. (Those women and men of all races who have been detained for interrogation — as was Steve Biko — are locked in police cells or prisons throughout the mainland and there are nine white politicals in Pretoria jail.)

Human rights

The men on the Island are those who have been tried, found guilty and sentenced to between three years and life under the state's security laws. Aged between 17 and 70, they are students, factory workers, lawyers, peasants, teachers, laborers, clerks, trade unionists, doctors. They have become criminals because they struggled to win elementary human rights for their people, whether by non-violent or violent methods.

Collecting seaweed from the Atlantic's icy waters, they can see ships coming and going from Cape Town, and on the horizon, Table Mountain; laboring in the quarries, they are "heirs" to a penal tradition over three centuries old.

The first men to live on the island were a group of convicts transported from England in 1615 — their leader was a highwayman from London — most of whom were drowned trying to escape. A subsequent attempt by the British to deposit three convicts there was abandoned when the men begged to be hanged rather than left in that God-forsaken pisce.

In 1652, during the Dutch East India Company's occupation of the Cape, the island came into use as a farm — but the vegetables and wheat withered, the sheep and pigs died, only rabbits flourished. So it was that the island reverted to being a prison: slaves who had stolen vegetables had their ears cut off and were kept chained for life there. But not only slaves and not only the indigenous Khoikhoi; the first Dutch settler was banished there after shooting his Khoi servant, and a burgher's wife was confined there on being found guilty of slander. Incidentally — far from apartheid being the "traditional" policy in South Africa — three of the first superintendents of the Island had "Colored" wives.

During the 18th century the Dutch exiled "rebellious" sheiks, princes and rajas from Java and the Moluccas to the island's hostile isolation. The British, returning to the Cape in the 19th century, used the place to confine Xhosa and Zulu chiefs defeated in frontier wars, as well as lunatics, lepers and paupers of all races, women as well as men. One young woman, Christiana Brown, confined there with her mother, a rheumatic pauper, wrote in 1861: "Truly this island is a land of darkness and of the shadow of death."

Of all these wretched beings, one has remained a symbol to the men now on Robben Island. Makana — a great Xhosa leader who, in 1819, led his people against the British incursion into the Eastern Cape. Defeated, he was condemned to life imprisonment on the island, doomed to work in irons in the quarries.

After a year Makana and 30 other prisoners overpowered the guards, seized a boat and escaped. The boat was upset in the turbulent seas. "Several who escaped," wrote the Scottish poet Thomas Pringle, "relate that Makana clung for some time to a rock, and that his deep sonorous voice was heard loudly cheering on those who were struggling with the billows, until he was swept off and engulfed by the raging surf." To this day there are Africans who call it "Makana Island."

Deer, ostrich

What information there is about conditions on the island over the past 15 years comes mainly from men who have served their sentences and, on release, have left South Africa by one means or another. The rare visitors permitted by the government get a pleasing impression: eucalyptus trees have been planted, deer and ostrich flourish in the yellow-blossomed bush.

In 1977, in an attempt to counteract adverse publicity, the prison authorities took a selected group of journalists to the island. They reported on such things as the spick-and-span cells, the impressive library, and on Nelson Mandela, observed digging in a garden. They were not allowed to question him or any other prisoner. An ex-prisoner who has filed complaints against the newspapers carrying these reports, comments: "One can't judge cruelty by inspecting physical surroundings."

Assaulted

Certainly over the years there have been marked reforms resulting from prisoners' protests by hunger strikes or formal petitions, despite risk of punishment (one prisoner, an Indian lawyer, was sentenced to six months' solitary confinement for a minor act of 'defiance'). In 1963, for instance, prisoners eventually managed to expose brutal assaults by warders; the publicity, both inside South Africa and abroad, brought an end to such violence. Visits from the International Red Cross help.

But prisoners have to struggle continually to remain people under the oppression of day after day of useless labor, poor food and perfunctory medical treatment; and in the face of prison officers' attempts to foment race hostility between Africans, Coloreds and Indians. Leaders, kept in a block of single cells, are isolated from the main body of prisoners who are themselves segregated — Namibians from South Africans, and the latest arrivals from all the others. A punishment afflicting all political prisoners is a total isolation from news, any news, of the world outside. This extends to visits and letters, which are restricted to families and which may deal only with family matters.

A severe deprivation lies in restriction of studies. There have always been difficulties for prisoners in arranging correspondence courses, but many have succeeded and studies have been a lifeline to them. The latest report from the island is that the level of education permitted is to be reduced to high school matriculation and that even this may not be allowed to some. Clearly the authorities resent — indeed fear — political prisoners' intellectual self-expression.

Nor are political prisoners allowed remission of sentence or parole.

How do the men cope over the years? An ex-prisoner explained: "It's one of the protective mechanisms of human nature — however adverse the conditions, you will find something to laugh at. We saw the humorous side of things which today, when I think of them, do not seem so funny."

60th birthday

Another reported: "On Robben Island there are Africans, Coloreds, Indians and, among the Africans, are Xhosas, Tswanas, Zulus, Shangaan, and a friendship and unity you can't find outside. These people, they can use one spoon when they are eating: Makavane, just like that." Makavane means comrades.

On July 18 Nelson Mandela will spend his 60th birthday on the island. Many of the men have families involved in the struggle. Winnie Mandela, who has with courage and tenacity carried on in her husband's absence — despite repeated imprisonment, trials, banning and now banishment — reports that his spirit is strong.

Among the youths who have recently arrived there is Naldedi Tsiki — a 22-year-old, sentenced to 14 years for sabotage. He concluded his statement to the Court: "What I did, I did with my eyes open. By so doing, I was merely trying to make my contribution towards a free and democratic South Africa, free of racism, humiliation and exploitation; a South Africa belonging to all who live in it, regardless of race, color or creed. To this ideal I have given myself and, whatever the consequences, I accept them."

Dirty Words Banned Here Too

By DENNIS BRAITHWAITE
Toronto Star

Is The Catcher In The Rye obscene and should it be banned from high school English studies?

I read J. D. Salinger's little masterpiece many years ago, and though I'm as prudish as the next fellow, it never entered my head that the book might be considered prurient or scatalogical. Salinger is one of the finest writers of the century and this is his magnum opus. Whom could it offend?

Some parents, apparently, at Clinton, Ont., where the board of education is under pressure to ban it and two other books from the local high schools.

It's the language of the novel, it seems, that has brought complaints, more so than any sexual stuff, of which there is little in the book. By today's literary standards, the words used are fairly mild, but not mild enough for some tastes.

There is a curious anomaly at work here. The other day, on CBC's Radio Noon, host Bruce Rogers, book critic William French and author June Callwood (who's also a spokesman for the Writers' Union), all agreed that banning books because of their language is a bad thing.

Yet none of them dared to use any of the offending words on the air. Nor would the Globe's Bill French use them in his book column. When I was at the Globe I tried hard to get a four-letter word into the paper because the context called for it. I failed.

Newspapers and broadcasting stations simply will not admit such words. Yet both often oppose the censorship of the same words by school boards who think that students should be shielded from them.

Everybody knows that high school kids (and public school kids) use dirty words in ordinary conversation. That is often advanced as reason enough to let them see them in their study books. Everybody knows, too, that readers of newspapers and listeners to broadcasts use such words. But nobody in the media feels their audience is entitled to see and hear such language.

If you want four-letter words, you have to read novels, go to the theatre, or more recently, the movies. Dirty language sells, no question of that. Today, a novel containing not a single four-letter word or explicit sexual scene wouldn't even get published, let alone make money.

I sometimes chafe because I am forbidden to use certain salty — obscene, if you like — expressions in my column. Yet I know that were I given complete freedom to use such words, the urge to do so would soon subside. They're like current slang; you can only use it about once or twice in writing before you begin to appear something less than literate.

The corrective is built in. If it ever came to pass that newspapers, magazines and radio and TV commentators began using common street words as an everyday thing, good authors, you can be sure, would immediately stop using them.

Do you think Margaret Laurence, or Philip Roth, or Robertson Davies would be caught dead writing in the kind of language employed by reporters, editorial writers (!) and disc-jockeys? Not bloody likely. (If you'll excuse the expression).

I love the good old Anglo-Saxon swear words and use them all the time around the house.

But I believe that in writing they have their limitations. Why don't we try it and see?

Imprisoned for Health

LONDON — There are plenty of countries where it is easier to get out of prison than to get out of hospital; to date Great Britain has not been one of them. At the moment, though, there's a case boiling around the courts which has implications far beyond the interests of the two sad people concerned: a woman with multiple sclerosis and her husband, who wants to take her home.

Multiple sclerosis is an illness from which you do not recover. Jessie Farr has it, and is in Victoria House, a home for the disabled in Kent; her husband Rodney, a retired photographer, desperately wants to have her home so that he can look after her for what time there is left. But the authorities think he won't be able to care for her properly; they won't let him have her; and they by now even monitor his calls and his visits to his dying wife.

Put like that, it sounds plain illegal, because in Britain you can't be kept inside unless you've been committed under the proper section of the Mental Health Act (or unless they've used part of an old Public Health Act that makes it possible for a community physician to bundle an old lady off to hospital to be built up a bit if she is neglecting herself, without the stigma of insanity).

In theory anyone who can find their clothes has a perfect right to leave a hospital if they want to, and we all have a right to refuse their horrible treatments and die privately if that is our wish.

But there have been endless complications in the case. When Mrs. Farr was in better shape she was quite clear she wanted to go home — but "home" is not the house she left, but the flat where her husband now lives. Rodney Farr has made a habeas corpus application which has been adjourned for a later hearing and the court of appeal has also refused to order his wife's release.

You might wonder why on earth an overburdened health service isn't only too thankful to let her go; but there is no suggestion that they are doing anything other than what they think is best for her.

He is trying to take the case further but he has already run through all his savings and most of his mother's — $8,000 in all. Time is running out on them; his wife can now only say "yes" and "no" and although she still says yes she wants to go home, no she doesn't want to stay, it gets less and less easy to be sure that her aye is aye and her nay is really nay.

Only — people who are doing what they think is right, especially what is right for other people, have to be watched just as closely as the real villains. You can see that from the one or two people who come to light every year who have spent half their lives wrongly confined in mental hospitals; it was all there in Sam Wannamaker's play The Shrike; you can see it from the Spanish Inquisition.

I think it's important for all of us that Rodney Farr should get his wife home — even for a day; even if he has to bring her back again if he can't cope — and so does the National Council for Civil Liberites which is helping him. It is vital that the principle of doing what is best for her should not win the day against what she actually wants — or did want, when she was more in control than she is now.

Best — in what sense? Medically best? Everybody knows someone who has refused some treatment, walked out on some doctor, and been all the better for it. And is health, in any case, all? The people who die every year strung up to drips and transfusions, tested and monitored and assaulted when the medics all know very well it's hopeless — wouldn't they be better off dying with dignity and no pretence of a possible cure?

The growth in popularity of hospices, where people are helped to accept death and not made to pretend they're getting better, would suggest that they very well might.

We have had protests about the right to live; protests recently about the right to death. Maybe the right to die as they like will be the next great battle to be fought by the living.

DEVELOP B.C. COAL, VISITOR CAUTIONS

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia's coal deposits should be fully explored and a progressive development program started now, Sir Derek Ezra, chairman of the British National Coal Board, told the Vancouver Board of Trade this week.

"You must get on with the job now and not delay your decision to explore your coal reserves," he said.

"Start on the infrastructure needed to get the coal to market and on environmental studies because there is a long lead time needed before the coal flows."

In an interview later, Ezra said B.C. should increase research on the coal technology of the future, explaining that "the way we're using coal today will have no comparison with the way we will use it in the future."

He said Britain is investing the equivalent of $1 billion Canadian a year in its coal industry.

Ezra said people must plan ahead for the energy shortage of the future.

"We must not be diverted by the current glut of oil and gas," he said. "This is the big danger."

B.C. RESOURCES INVESTMENT CORPORATION

R. G. S. CURRIE

David L. Helliwell, president of the British Columbia Resources Investment Corporation, announces that R.G.S. Currie has been appointed Vice-President, Oil and Gas. Mr. Currie moves to B.C.R.I.C. from Panarctic Oils Ltd., Calgary, where he was Vice-President, Land and Administration. During 27 years in the Canadian petroleum industry, Mr. Currie has held a wide variety of senior positions. With B.C.R.I.C., he will be responsible for administering the Corporation's oil and gas activities.

Offer Extended

TORONTO (CP) — The Molson Companies Ltd. announced that its offer for Diversey Corp. common stock, made May 19, has been extended to 4 p.m. EDT June 30 and will not be further extended. Molson is offering $30 a share in cash. So far, it has received 96.7 per cent of the outstanding Diversey shares.

Gold

LONDON (AP) — Closing gold prices Tuesday in U.S. dollars an ounce: London- 184.75; Paris- 186.87; Frankfurt- 185.23; Zurich- 184.625; Hong Kong- 182.74.

BONDS

TORONTO (CP) — Prices were fractionally higher in active trading on the Canadian bond market Tuesday. The short end of the market was unchanged. Mid-, long-term and provincial issues rose one-quarter of a point. Corporate issues gained one-eighth. Day-to-day money was available at 8½ per cent.

Auto-Buying Spurt Puzzles Analysts

DETROIT (AP) — New-car buyers have turned ravenous in the face of a "nibble, nibble" pricing policy by U.S. auto-makers, but analysts are at odds over whether the surge is a feast for the industry or a harbinger of hard times to come.

Six months ago, the industry had everyone nervous as it struggled through an unexpected winter-long slump. But on "some magic day in March," as one analyst put it, auto sales took off.

U.S. citizens bought more cars in May than in any month in history, and two straight 10-day sales records have been set so far in June. Auto sales are running at a remarkable 12-million-plus annual rate.

Everybody agrees it cannot last, and that some motorists are grabbing up new cars to beat future price increases. But there is less agreement on what that means for sales next fall or in 1979.

Richard Haydon, auto analyst for the Goldman, Sachs investment firm, says it is no coincidence that sales started to soar after U.S. auto-makers decided to institute periodic small price increases rather than one big boost with the introduction of new models in the fall.

"The frequency of the increases reinforces in the consumer's mind that today's prices will be lower than tomorrow's prices," Haydon said. "I believe there has been some pre-buying. It's going to have an adverse effect, but it's impossible to quantify."

Other analysts note that price-conscious consumers buying cars late in the model year to avoid fall price increases is not new.

"The question is whether more people are pre-buying this year, causing an unseasonal bulge in sales that must be paid back later," saus a Ford Motor Co. analyst who asked that his name not be used. "The answer is not known."

David Healy of Drexel, Burnham and Co. predicts a quick drop in sales for the fourth quarter. But he rejects the argument that the current situation is like the buy-in-advance psychology of the summer of 1974, which preceded a severe auto-industry slump that helped lead the U.S. into a recession.

"The idea's the same but (1977) is a hell of a lot milder," he said.

The Ford analyst is even more optimistic. He argues that the sales figures closely correspond to increases in non-farm employment and the gross national product more than a year ago and that the latest buying splurge has merely cancelled out the winter losses.

Victim Breathes; Slaying Trial On

ST. PAUL, Minn. (UPI) — A judge ruled Tuesday Denise Mercedes Ellison must stand trial on charges of the "brain death" murder of her 4-year-old daughter, who has been declared dead although she still breathes and her blood still flows.

District Judge Harold Schultz set April 14 as the date for trial in the precedent-setting child-abuse case.

Ms. Ellison, 24, is charged with third degree murder in the death of her daughter, Stacey, and is being held in Ramsey County jail under $25,000 bail.

At the request of Ramsey County attorney William Randall, Schultz ordered a pre-trial mental examination of Ms. Ellison.

Schultz rejected contentions by the mother's public defender, Louis Torinus, that the death certificate was invalid because the little girl is still breathing with the aid of life-support systems at Children's Hospital.

The judge said he had not declared the girl legally dead.

"I accepted the death certificate as evidence, prima facie evidence, of death," he said in an interview after setting the trial date. "The question of whether she is legally dead must be decided later."

Dr. Richard C. Gehrz of the hospital staff signed the death certificate shortly after the battered child was brought in June 3.

The Minnesota State Medical Association recognizes "brain death" as valid, but the courts have followed common law definition of death as the moment the heart and breathing stop.

Only 18 states have certified "brain death" as the definition of legal death.

The hospital petitioned a court last week to authorize the cut-off of the life support systems. Without a court order, the hospital said said it could not disconnect the life support lest it run the risk of being named an accomplice to murder. District Judge Archie L. Gingold set July 6 for a hearing on the petition.

The child's grandmother, Dorothy Ellison, Chicago, said she saw "no point" in keeping the life support machine on.

"If there's no life in the body, they can disconnect it," she said in a telephone interview.

The child's court-appointed guardian, Hugh Markley, chairman of the juvenile court committee of the Ramsey County Bar Association, urged the support systems remain on.

"The child is still alive" under common law rules, he said.

'Jarvis Fever' Alarms Union

LAS VEGAS, Nev., (AP) — The largest AFL-CIO union in the United States adopted a resolution Tuesday condemning California's Proposition 13 after a heated debate in which delegates warned that "Jarvis fever" was spreading across the country.

Some 3,500 delegates to the convention of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees shouted a resounding "aye" approving the measure, which asks the U.S. federal government to aid progressive tax reform at the state and local levels.

Proposition 13, approved in a referendum on June 6, slashes property taxes in California by more than half.

One delegate, Lena Ramirez of San Antonio, Texas, told the convention: "We are tired of public employees being the brunt every time they talk about taxes . . . We have had what is called Proposition 13 fever in Texas.

"Let's tell everyone that as far as public employees are concerned, tax reform is okay. But tax reforms such as Proposition 13, where they cost us our jobs, can go to hell," she said.

The resolution said the union would "work to mitigate the devasting effect of Proposition 13," and urged public officials to "stop fuelling the fires of anti-government zealots by proposing gimmicks in the place of the established processes of representative government."

DOWNDRAFT CITED

VILLE MARIE, Que. (CP) — A longtime resident of the Lake Timiskaming area said today that canoeing conditions were ideal a few hours before three canoes overturned on the lake June 11, drowning 12 students and an instructor.

But Radway said the wind rose quickly at about 3 p.m. He said these winds in springtime when the water is still extremely cold can result in sudden downdrafts which sweep across the lake from the west. He said he has known the lake all his life and told the inquest these downdrafts are "difficult to foresee . . . especially if you have never been on the lake before."

The 12 students who died were among 27 boys, aged 10 to 15, from St. John's School in Claremont, Ont.

U.S. Army Plan For Europe Cache Stirs Controversy

WASHINGTON (WP) — The U.S. Army is moving ahead with a controversial plan to store more than half of its total combat equipment in Europe where it would be in range of Soviet bombers and missiles.

Backers of the plan contend that getting the tanks, guns, missiles and helicopters into Europe before any war starts is the best way to insure that troops based in the United States could move into battle quickly.

Critics counter that this new plan, which would strip home-based divisions of much of their weaponry, amounts to putting too many eggs in one basket at a time when war is most likely to occur outside of Europe.

Besides the strategic concerns, Robert Komer, Defence Secretary Harold Brown's NATO adviser, told a private meeting of the Atlantic Council last week that the new plan to ship enough weapons to Europe to arm three divisions will be so costly that Congress may balk at providing the money, according to source who heard his speech.

Although an Army spokesman said Tuesday he had been unable to get money figures released, a secret Pentagon document estimates that it would cost slightly over $2 billion to store the equipment.

De Beauvoir, Sartre Seek Wife's Release

PARIS (Reuter) — The family of Frenchman Denis Maschino, who alleged that his Algerian wife was kidnapped in Canada and taken to Algeria by her brother, today handed a petition to the Algerian embassy to be forwarded to President Houari Boumedienne.

In the petition the family of Maschino, a French Christian living in Montreal, protested to the president about the conditions in which they said Dalila Maschino was being held by her brother, Algerian millionaire Messaoud Zeghar.

The petition was also signed by several French intellectuals, including writer Simone de Beauvoir and philosopher Jean-Paul Sartre.

French legal sources said recently that Mrs. Maschino was taken back to Algeria in Zeghar's private plane late in April.

Saanich Stands Firm On Five-Acre Minimum

There will be no relaxation of Saanich's policy on urban containment, aldermen agreed Tuesday night.

The lands, planning and housing committee accepted planner Gil Laurenson's advice and rejected a 150-name petition requesting that the present five-acre subdivision minimum in the Hector-Libert-Ivor area be reduced to two acres.

All areas ot the municipality lying outside the urban containment boundary are limited to a lot size of not less than five acres, and Laurenson urged that that policy be maintained to avoid urban sprawl with all its attendant problems.

"In my view urbanization of such areas need never occur," he said. "And it is very important, not just as an economic principle, but to the preservation of a quality of lifestyle for future generations of Saanich residents that the line of urbanization be held."

Contractor Nick Liberto claimed if a plebiscite were held on the question his stand in favor of smaller lots would receive overwhelming support.

He said relaxing the subdivision minimum would create a better economic housing environment and make a smaller acreage available to those who could not afford five acres.

Subdivision's Fate Not Political Issue

The fate of a controversial subdivision in the Cook-Quadra area will be determined by the Saanich official empowered to approve or reject such applications, without any influence from the political arena, Saanich aldermen agreed Tuesday night.

But municipal administrator William Tremayne assured the lands, planning and housing committee that concerns expressed by aldermen would be taken into consideration by the approving officer — municipal planner Gil Laurenson — in deciding on a proposed 15-lot subdivision between Clovelly Terrace and Tattersall Drive.

The subdivision was approved tentatively five years ago but is now awaiting final approval.

Residents of Clovelly, a narrow, hilly dead-end street, had turned out in force at last week's committee meeting to oppose the plan to allow access from Clovelly to nine of the homes on the subdivision.

They claimed it would create serious traffic problems and destroy the charming character of the street.

Municipal engineer Cliff Warren was asked to investigate the possibility of servicing the site largely from Tattersall, but he said in a report Tuesday that the steep grades and visbility problems involved ruled out that alternative.

An accompanying memorandum from municipal solicitor D.A.M. Patterson noted that the approving officer has statutory powers to carry out his job, and council would therefore be unwise to put any pressure on him to approve or reject any subdivision proposal.

Notwithstanding that advice, Ald. David Paterson told the committee he wanted to go on record as opposed to allowing access from either Tattersall or Clovelly.

Both were undesirable, he said, and council was putting the approving officer in the position of having to accept the lesser of two evils.

Paterson said he failed to see why, under such circumstances, the subdivision should be approved at all.

Land-Use Contracts Supported

Zoning, land use and school taxes have top priority among Oak Bay aldermen who have suggested resolutions for the fall meeting of the Union of B.C. Municipalities.

Council has approved a resolution asking Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis to reconsider the phase-out of land-use contracts as a method of controlling development design in sensitive areas. This instrument should remain available to councils in cases where there is insufficient flexibility to achieve best land use by means of zoning and development permits, it was argued.

Oak Bay also opposes the elimination of a two-thirds majority required to pass zoning bylaws. The two-thirds provision should remain as a local option to councils which attach more importance to zoning than others.

"Zoning is more important than a simple majority. Zoning is forever," said Mayor Brian Smith.

On school taxes, the council wants any increases in school district operating costs over 110 per cent of the basic education program put to a referendum.

Parliamentarians Plan World Action

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — In an age when domestic problems are often affected by international issues, a group of Canadian MPs are working to develop closer ties with the politicians of other countries.

The Canadians have set up a forum called Parliamentarians for World Order and, after a series of preparatory meetings just finished, hope to attract legislators from 30 countries to a meeting late next fall.

The drive to set up the group was led by Windsor Liberal Mark MacGuigan and David MacDonald, a Prince Edward Island Conservative.

Those two, and their Commons colleagues, Andy Hogan, a Cape Breton New Democrat and Jacques Trudel, a Montreal Liberal, met parliamentarians from the U.S., Denmark and Sweden in the last of the preparatory meetings Tuesday. Earlier meetings involved legislators from Britain and the Netherlands, among others.

MacGuigan and MacDonald said in an interview they feel legislators should be more aware of international issues, particularly those involving the UN. They said the planned meetings would allow a variety of viewpoints from persons who, because they are elected, are closer to the people of their countries than are diplomats.

"Parliamentarians are a sort of very direct link with the people," MacDonald said. "Often the views the people have, the desires that people have, are very common across national boundaries."

They said they feel that bringing MPs, congressmen and other legislators together for talks on world issues and problems might also provide the kind of discussion that is hampered at the diplomatic level by bureaucracy and protocol.

MacGuigan said he hopes that parliamentarians from a number of countries might agree to press their governments in certain directions.

"That obviously won't be easy to achieve," he said. "In a way, though, it's easier to achieve between parliamentarians than between diplomats because we can be, perhaps, a little bit less tied to maintaining the status quo. We don't have to be so cautious as the diplomats."

"A diplomat, his responsibilities are to his own government back in the capital," MacDonald added. "Members of Parliament have a basic responsibility to their constituency and a secondary one to . . . their own party."

MacGuigan said the germ of the idea for the forum came out of meetings of the Canadian World Federalist Parliamentary Association of which he is president. MacDonald is a past-president.

"We've increasingly seen the need for this," MacGuigan said. MPs often meet other legislators at conferences but rarely have are able to sit down and discuss a range of important world issues.

He noted that there is a body called the Interparliamentary Union, but it does not focus on specific issues. Rather, it simply brought parliamentarians together.

MacDonald said the idea is to build on what is already happening. He said some 30 countries, including Canada, have parliamentarians attached to their UN delegations in various capacities.

"We think these parliamentarians could really benefit from meeting as a group," he continued. He wanted to see a more constructive role for parliamentarians.

4th Food Price Report

Two University of Victoria economics students, on a grant from the federal department of labor, are undertaking a summer-long study on the effect of the availability of comparative food price information on Victorians' buying decisions.

The two, who will remain anonymous until the completion of the project, today released the fourth in a series of weekly reports on prices in 28 retail food stores in the Greater Victoria area. Purpose of the reports, according to the students, is to assist consumers in deciding which stores offer the best buys in the purchase of a large grocery order.

A basic food basket listing 65 items, with prices "weighted" in proportion to their importance in the average family food budget according to methods devised by Statistics Canada for a large B.C. city in 1976, was used in the study.

The students say it must be recognized that while prices are of considerable importance to consumers in their shopping habit, other factors cannot be overlooked. Non-price factors such as location, store layout, courtesy and helpfulness of store personnel, parking facilities, quality of merchandise and efficiency of checkout service are takn into account by shoppers when choosing food stores.

This week's report is the third to include a history of previous store performance. Week-to-week aberrations may occur but as the study develops, store performance over a period of time should prove a better indicator of it's price levels.

Ontario Berries Allowed To Rot

WATERFORD, Ont. (CP) — Local strawberry growers say acres of strawberries will be left to rot in the field because of an influx of cheap strawberries from California.

"Last week, the chain stores refused to buy our berries because they had cheap California berries on the shelves," Peter Shabatura of Waterford said today.

Shabatura said the California berries are quickly inspected at the border, then sold immediately to large supermarket chains and other outlets.

Shabatura, who estimates he will lose about $100,000 this year, said he has started plowing under 15 of his 50 acres allotted to strawberries.

"Imports are so strong and so heavy," he said. "It's drastic and it's going to put a lot of us under. That means bankruptcy."

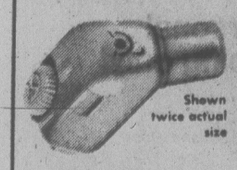

Max Steele, also of Waterford, said he has sales arranged for only half of the amount he normally picks.

Steele said part of the problem is the backlog of strawberries at the brokers, or middlemen, who sell the berries to the chain stores.

Steele said Jacob's Farms, one of the strawberry brokers, is already overstocked with berries in storage. Picked berries have a shelf life of three days.

Waterford is 25 kilometres south of Brantford.

Restraint Still Needed: Chretien

Times News Services

TORONTO — Finance Minister Jean Chretien had both good and bad news Tuesday for Canadians.

The good news, Chretien told the Conference Board in Canada, is that Canada's economy will likely do better this year than the average among the industrialized countries.

The bad news if that Canadians must still moderate their demands on the economy.

The finance minister said Canadians must accept that rising import prices mean they will have less money to spend.

And he warned of "disturbing signs" that labor groups in the public and private sectors plan to demand big wage rises after pay and price controls end this year.

People should be content to have less income now, and wait until output per person increases, trade improves and unemployment is reduced, he said. After that, consumers' buying power will increase.

Slowing down inflation must be a priority economic goal for 1978 and 1979, Chretien said.

The minister said the improvement of Canada's foreign trade balance is the most important and most sustained element of strength. Canada has benefitted from the strong growth in the United States, and from a combin of better control over domestic costs and the drop in the exchange rate.

"This better trade performance is a key force in our medium-term projections for the economy recovery between now and 1982. We have much more to gain yet from our improved competitive position," he said.

He hoped this would begin to show up in tourism totals as well as in the trade in goods.

"The wheat situation looks strong. There are signs of improvement in the market for base metals. There is great interest in additional exports of energy," he said.

Another source of strength has been consumer spending. The volume of retails sales turned upward in the middle of last year.

A major impetus to the subsequent advance has been the rising level of employment. Strong support has been also provided by fiscal action in the form of income tax cuts and more recently sales tax cuts, he said.

Nonetheless, the finance minister said he finds the over-all performance of output "disappointing and puzzling." In the first three months this year, real gross national product, or total production of goods and services, grew at a weak 2.8 per cent annual rate.

Courts to Set Addict Terms

out, is home to about 10,000 addicts, representing 60 per cent of Canada's total.

The heroin industry generates from $400 million to $500 million a year in illicit money, the minister said, a total which represents the province's fifth largest business.

"Surely it is to our national shame that Vancouver has an international reputation second only to Amsterdam as a major entry, holding and transfer point for heroin shipment," McClelland said recently.

The Canadian Bar Association said the plan deprived addicts of their right to a fair trial and in doing so constituted an unprecedented and dangerous attack on the criminal justice system.

Former health minister Dennis Cocke (NDP—New Westminister) said all other such schemes caried out in the Western world this century have failed, and McClelland has done nothing to indicate that B.C.'s would be any different.

"He's offering hope when there's no hope to offer," Cocke said Tuesday.

Opposition party spokesmen say the plan may inadvertently help the B.C.'s heroin problem, however, by driving addicts out of the province.

Government and police spokesmen across the Prairies have expressed fear their areas may be flooded by addicts fleeing B.C.

"There's no doubt that quite a few addicts will leave B.C. if the legislation is passed," Insp. Jim Beattiev, who is in charge of the Calgary drug squad, said earlier this month.

McClelland said the plan will have the opposite affect. Addicts will be relieved to take part in the plan, he said.

No Work, But Paid: NDP

Some former public works employees are receiving full pay even though they are not working, says Emery Barnes (NDP-Vancouver Centre).

During debate on highways and public works department estimates in the legislature, Barnes said he knows of one employee, who he did not name, who receives a regular salary even though he lost his job when the B.C. Buildings Corp. (BCBC) was established in 1977.

Barnes said there are several employees in their early 60s who are considered too old to retrain but who are too young to retire and are being paid full wages.

Lorne Nicolson (NDP-Creston) suggested that the government was using payoffs to quiet laid-off employees, a charge that Mines Minister Jim Chabot, standing in for the ailing Highways Minister Alex Fraser, said was unfounded and disgraceful.

Nicolson, however, attacked the BCBC's policy of reducing public works functions and contracting out work, saying it is costing taxpayers thousands of dollars.

NINE SOLDIERS DIE

WURZBURG, West Germany (AP) — Nine U.S. soldiers assigned to the 8th Infantry Division were killed today in a helicopter crash about 15 kilometres southwest of here, the U.S. Army announced. The army said the UN-1 helicopter was on a flight from Baumholder to the army's sprawling Grafenwoehr training area near the Czechoslovak border. The cause of the crash has not been determined and names of the victims were being withheld.

The Silver Lining In Antiques

By HUMPHRY DAVY
Times Staff

Collecting antique Canadian silver is a fascinating hobby — and one of the most profitable around — but it isn't easy to acquire top-flight articles these days.

Tara Nanavati, Provincial Museum museologist and one of Canada's top authorities on silverware made in this country, says: "Any person who started collecting 10 years ago, is a wealthy individual today.

"A silver letter opener which sold for $150 10 years ago is now claiming $700 and more."

And she says apart from rising costs, top-grade articles are now scarce.

But despite her knowledge of silver and the chances she's had to collect antiques, Nanavati doesn't have any Canadian silverware.

"I would rather see it collected by museums and displayed for everyone to see and enjoy," she says.

Nanavati is in charge of the mangnificent antique silver collection belonging to the Henry Birks Company which goes on display at the museum on Thursday.

The collection — 168 pieces in all — will be on view in the modern history division's temporary exhibit gallery on the third floor.

It will be on display until next Jan. 15.

The exhibition is the first of its kind in Western Canada and it incorporates pieces from the 1700s to the 1940s.

It includes church silver, mostly from Quebec as well as some Indian articles.

"The display follows the lines of Canadian history, starting off with the French influence in the 1700s, the transition from French to British rule and the development of the Maritimes," she said.

The collection includes some outstanding pieces by Francois Ranvoyze (1739-1819), whose works are considered as oustanding as those of European silversmith of that period.

The exhibit which Nanavati considers one of the most unique is an old bible in leather with a silver crucifix and clasps mounted on the leather.

"You seldom see silver mounted on leather," she explained.

She said one problem in collecting antique Canadian silverware is that articles didn't have official hallmarks until 1906. But the standard of workmanship is high.

Henry Birks launched the collection in 1936.

"Unfortunately, he found that many fine examples of early Canadian silver had been lost forever having been consigned to the melting pot," she said.

Timber Trades Eyed

By HUMPHRY DAVY
Times Staff

Timber trade-offs may be necessary to compensate the multi-national forest companies for loss of timber rights on public lands in the proposed third phase of Pacific Rim National Park, Recreation and Conservation Minister Sam Bawlf has indicated.

Bawlf sent a letter on the controversial issue to Liberal leader Gordon Gibson who released it today.

The third phase of the park includes the Bamfield peninsula, the West Coast Trail and three Nitinat Lakes yet to be designated as parklands.

"Forest companies with valid entitlements on land within the new boundaries may require compensation, possibly by substitution of forest values elsewhere," Bawlf said in his first statement on the subject since he became a cabinet minister two years ago.

The matter of timber tenures arose when both government agreed to enlarge the proposed park boundaries to include the three Nitinat lakes in the park, he said.

But the minister gives no indication when he will take steps to designate the boundary of the West Coast Trail.

He states in his letter a forest inventory and valuation of the land in question is nearly completed.

The figures will enable the provincial government to consider with Parks Canada the proposed changes to the boundary, Bawlf said.

Gibson, a strong supporter of the trail between Port Renfrew and Bamfield, has been pressing the Social Credit government for information on the progress being made on including the coastal land strip and three lakes in the park.

Trail supporters have been waiting for eight years for the province to turn over the land to Parks Canada, as promised in the original agreement between Ottawa and B.C. Logging companies have always opposed the proposal.

Meanwhile, Robert Nixon, executive director of the Sierra Club, said a move is afoot to organize a Save the West Coast Trail Committee in the event the provincial government attempts to back away from the agreement.

The committee will have representatives from the mainland and Vancouver Island citizen groups, he said.

"Apart from the thousands of sympathizers, we have the support of more than 50,000 people who have been on the trail. We will seek financial support.

"The government has promised the trail and lakes would be included in the park, but for one reason or another, has been dragging its feet — doing nothing to designate the boundaries. It's one excuse after another," Nixon said.

He noted the new Forest Act will make it more difficult for the province to acquire the land.

Under the old act, he said, the government had the means to obtain the land without compensation.

"The new act virtually places public lands under the complete control of multi-national companies. It makes them that much more powerful."

'Follow Own Advice' On Industrial Park

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

Saanich Ald. Dave Paterson said today he believes Saanich council is doing the wrong thing in committing itself to a $585,000 land purchase without knowing whether the proposed use for the property will ever be realized.

Paterson was referring to council's decision Monday at an in-camera meeting to buy more than 100 acres of Crown land on Interurban Road from the B.C. Development Corporation, as part of a land banking scheme to establish an industrial park.

The decision was not unanimous and Paterson confirmed that he was one of the aldermen who voted against the motion.

He said he firmly believes an industrial park is needed, but council should approach the planning in a more careful and rational way.

He said his chief objection is that council is ignoring the fundamental advice it gives to every developer: never assume that everything is going to go through smoothly.

Saanich advice to developers has been to complete all necessary studies, secure options on the land in question and then approach the municipality. Only once rezoning has been obtained should they exercise their options to purchase the land.

"We tell them, don't give us a sob story that you have invested thousands of dollars; it's a buyer beware situation. Yet now we're not following our own advice," Paterson said.

He said there is a "host of hurdles" to clear before the industrial park proposal becomes reality, and council should have taken options on the land rather than plunge into outright purchase — whether it was a good deal or not.

"I really do believe the mayor (Mayor Mel Couvelier) is in reckless pursuit of this one-shot deal and he has got this great pie-in-the-sky profit he is hoping to realize," Paterson added.

"That may come about and if it does, God bless him, he deserves full credit for it. But we've been accused before of backroom planning and you're seeing a classic example of it now."

LEGAL AID FOR SUSPECT

A 40-year-old farm laborer was charged in Victoria provincial court Tuesday with second-degree murder.

Avtar Singh Gill, address not given, appeared before Judge William Ostler, who read the charge in connection with the death Monday morning of 55-year-old Joseph Pelkey of the West Saanich Indian Reserve.

The incident allegedly happened at 8:30 a.m. at a Central Saanich farm owned by Tom Michell. Pelkey died at 4:36 p.m. at Royal Jubilee Hospital from a stab wound in the chest.

Gill, through an interpreter, told Ostler he had no lawyer and said he wanted to be released.

Ostler said the court had no authority to deal with bail in murder charges, and remanded Gill until this morning so a legal aid lawyer can be arranged.

Saanich Seeks Aid To Buy Gorge Land

Saanich officials were instructed Tuesday night to investigate all possible funding sources — particularly government financing — for $1.6 million to acquire a nine-acre waterfront property which adjoins the present park at Gorge and Tillicum.

The land in question is the site of the former San Sebastian Motel and Victoria Motor Court, and was to have been developed under a land-use contract as a 261-unit apartment complex.

But the project was first delayed because Saanich couldn't provide sewers in time and now, apparently, the plans for the development have been either stalled indefinitely or abandoned and the site is up for sale.

Terry Farmer, spokesman for 76 Developments, the group of Victoria businessmen behind the scheme, confirmed this week that the property is available for $1,650,000, after it was decided to put the project "in limbo" until conditions in the housing market improved.

Municipal planner Gil Laurenson said in a lyrical report to council's planning committee that the delay "could be likened to an invitation through fate's intervention, to the decision-makers and citizens of the entire region to do something to ensure its preservation."

But Saanich couldn't afford the asking price and efforts to obtain funds from trusts and foundations had met with no success, he said.

Laurenson claimed the Gorge property has as much significance to the region generally as Victoria's Inner Harbor "upon which so much public money is being lavished."

Stand-Off Develops On Marina Project

Proponents and opponents of a marina expansion and possible housing development at Tsehum Harbor were equally matched at a public information meeting at Parkland Secondary School in North Saanich Tuesday night.

About 200 persons attended the meeting called by North Saanich advisory planning commission to review a proposal submitted by Bob Wright of North Saanich Marina Ltd. involving 37 acres between Tsehum Inlet and Blue Heron Basin.

Both sides got loud applause with opponents arguing the development would irreparably alter the area's natural state, and the development's defenders pointing out there is a pressing need for more moorage facilities in the municipality.

Adrien Gilmore, chairman of the APC, told the audience no formal development application has been placed before council.

Victoria lawyer Louis Lindholm, representing Wright, said his client asks nothing more than a fair judgment on what he believes to be a fair proposal.

Lindholm noted Wright is prepared to dedicate 12 acres as a nature sanctuary and added the municipality will also be offered first option to purchase 15 more acres over a three-year period.

The proposal includes expanding the existing Bosun's Marina from 350 berths to about 600 berths and a housing development involving roughly 120 homes on 15 acres for a maximum density of eight units per acre.

Lindholm said the marina expansion would generate about $50,000 in tax revenue for the municipality.

Doctor Hurt

A Saanich doctor is in fair condition in Royal Jubilee Hospital after his car went off the road and slammed into a tree near the entrance to Mount Douglas Park Tuesday night.

Police said Dr. John Neville, 59, of 1662 Barksdale Drive, received head and chest injuries in the mishap which occurred at 8:47 p.m.

Neville was alone in the car and travelling north along Cordova Bay Road at the time.

Youth Takes a Whirl at Hunt for Canadian Identity

It's all vastly different from the radical, often violent, winds of change that blew through the 60s.

Yet when 22 young people from the far-flung corners of this great nation arrived in Victoria last Friday, they came seeking change, too. And new friends of a different culture. And perhaps this is the way to go about it, after all.

From Ontario, Quebec and even as far away as Nova Scotia and the Northwest Territories they came and when they leave this Friday they'll each take a Victoria student back home with them for a week.

The quest for change and the search for the elusive Canadian identity during a two and-a-half-day weekend seminar lent a new twist to the YM-YWCA's Visions national exchange program, which is supported by the federal Secretary of State Department's travel fund.

I went down to the Y Monday morning to listen in while moderator David Wolsk and co-ordinators Corey Gibson and Maureen Mark staged the seminar's windup session where each of the five study groups presented their reports and recommendations.

Very interesting, too.

"Basically, we were studying Canadian identity and taking a closer look at the B.C. region," Gibson told me. "The most remarkable thing to show up was the great pride all these young people have in the areas from where they come. But they are very regional. They all know their own regions well but few knew anything about B.C. when they came here."

Aged 15 to 22, their recommendations for change are idealistic.

"Our group decided French should be taught from kindergarten up with total immersion," explained Diana Holokowski of Victoria. "And that there should be more emphasis on Canadian history in education.

"In culture we discussed the drain to the United States and decided there should be more funding for Canadian drama and more Canadian content in the media.

"We concluded that it was very hard to pin down just what Canadian identity is because of the diversity of the resources and the people," Diana said. "In fact, one of Canada's main resources is its diversity."

But not all the students agreed on that one.

"We do have an identity but we don't seem to know what it is," suggested Eva Sennewald of Victoria, the leader of another study group. "The rest of the world knows we have a Canadian identity but we can't find it. We're feeling down on ourselves right now because of the Quebec problem and so it should be resolved as soon as possible."

And the way to resolve it?

"We all agreed," said Eva, "that Quebec should not separate. And that we should all learn French for our own benefit and not to make Quebec happy."

Other supremely idealistic suggestions included one that media coverage should be more evenly spread across the country instead of concentrating always on Ontario and Quebec, and that industry should be more Canadian-owned.

"Americans should have their say, but Canadians should make the decisions," said Eva.

Listening in on the final morning's discussion were several guests, including Jesse Dillard, regional liaison officer for the Secretary of State Department, who told the young people that another key problem they might have discussed was the effect on unemployment of technology.

Chamber of Commerce president Brian Small felt the students might have gone more into the decentralization of federal power and the shifting of decision-making to the provinces, which he termed one of the main questions facing Canada today.

But Small also said the concept of the seminar was exciting.

"Your exercise here is a very interesting experiment . . . and I'm really impressed with your recommendations," he told the students.

It was a valuable learning experience, too, said Angus Shaw of Victoria.

"I've learned a lot through this," he said. "It's a chance to meet other young Canadians and something we need. I no longer believe Nova Scotia is a fish town and I think there are visitors here who no longer believe all of us in British Columbia are lumberjacks!"

Marjorie Tugak of NWT and Cathy Mayzes of Victoria

And even outside the seminar the young visitors and their hosts are learning things in their first week of the exchange.

"So many things are different here," Marjorie Tugak of Rankin Inlet in the Northwest Territories, told me with wide eyes. "Like the weather, the trees and all the people."

"Yes, I'm really looking forward to going to Rankin Inlet with Marjorie," her Victoria host Cathy Mayzes said with a big grin.

"Some of the things she asks me are so weird that I can't always think of answers. Things you never think about; and it never occurs to you that perhaps some people have never seen these things.

"Like, when she first arrived she stopped and stared and asked 'How do they paint those lines in the middle of the road?' "

So We Move Games To Universal Studios...

As reported daily in stupifying detail, the city of Los Angeles is having problems keeping the 1984 Olympic Games. (Pause here while the population of Canada yawns and says "So what?")

The International Olympic Committee awarded Los Angeles the Games for the excellent reason that Los Angeles was the only city that applied. Now the IOC's threatening to take them elsewhere because Los Angeles won't assume full responsibility should the whole thing go down the tubes.

But fear not. NBC television is considering underwriting the entire 1984 Games. Did George Orwell have a time machine, or what?

NBC wants television rights to the 1984 Games. Those rights have not yet been awarded. So, in the best Orwellian tradition. Chet Simmons, president of NBC Sports, has made an announcement in Newspeak:

"Nothing's official, nothing's been put on the table," he said in replying to rumors that his network might underwrite the Games. "But if I had to answer yes or no I would say yes."

Thus we are faced with the distinct possibility that the network in charge of televising the Summer Games will also be the network paying the bills if the Games take a loss. We'll be back with more honest, investigative, hard-hitting coverage in a moment, fans, but first ...

It isn't surprising, really. National Football League teams already get $5.5 million each per season from television rights. Pro basketball and major league baseball teams get $1 million apiece.

But if NBC underwrites the Games and is responsible for any financial losses, then NBC is going to have a large say in the way those Games are presented — and in methods of cutting back those losses.

We now take you to 1984 and the Los Angeles offices of Chet Simmons, where the final organizational meeting of the Southern California Committee for the Olympic Games is in full session ...

The chairman has the floor.

"Mr. Simmons, we come now to the matter of these format changes you've ordered for certain Games events."

Simmons: "Right. Move they be accepted in total. My executive assistant seconds the motion. Carried, right? We were going to have a vote, but timewise ..."

Chairman: "Mr. Simmons, you don't understand. There are years of tradition behind the Games. You don't just change an evelt. Why, Baron de Coubertin would never have ..."

Simmons: "Who's he? The founder of the modern Olympics? Big deal. How much time he ever sell, how many spots? Did he ever have to tie in a 100 metres with the grave dangers of offending unless you buy some crumby deodorant? To hell with him. If he bitches, buy him off. Make him an assistant producer or something."

Chairman: "But . . . he's been dead for 60 years!"

Simmons: "Good. Then we've got no problem. Now, what else?"

Chairman: "Well, there's this item about staging the entire Games on the back lot at Universal Studios. It's not workable. In the first place, there's no room for spectators, and ...

Simmons: "Exactly. They can't come in to see it live, they stay home to watch it on the tube. We've got a lock on that so we get the big numbers guaranteed and we can hike up the commercial price per minute. Next?"

Chairman: "Well, really, Mr. Simmons, this stipulation that a minimum 90 per cent of all track events end in photo finishes. No one could guarantee that. No one!"

Simmons: "Crap! We do it every week on Little House on the Prairie. The doctor with the vaccine gets there one second before little Laura taps out with tepminal measles, we cut to commercial, come back for the big finish where everybody laughs and boom, we go to black. What's the big deal? You tell these guys they finish close or we do another take."

Chairman: "Another take! You mean you're planning to rerun every event until ..."

Simmons: "Until we get it right. We've got big bucks in this thing. We're not going to let it get screwed up by some Kenyan nobody who comes out of the bush and lapq all the Americans. What the hell do,we care how it plays in Kenya? They don't even run Nielsens."

Chairman: "Well, perhaps we could, uh, put that one aside for the moment and face the bigger problem. Under 'Casting' you've got Gladys Knight and the Pips. We were wondering what you meant by that."

Simmons: "Simple. The Olympics are dominated by black athletes, right. So I figure we just substitute blacks people know for blacks people don't know. We've got Gladys under contract anyway, so we put her in the 100, the Pips do the 400 relay.

Chairman: "But, even assuming you could convince the U.S. Olympic Committee to let them run, they aren't athletes. They'd never win in a million years!"

Simmons: "So who's gonna know? We tape the race, tape a shot of Gladys breaking one tape, the Pips another, then we dub in that shot at the finish of the race, and there it is."

Chairman: "But that's . . . that's monsterous! That's despicable! That's ..."

Simmons: "That's television. Move we adjourn."

NBA Braves Shifting to San Diego?

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Details of a contract are being drawn up to move the Buffalo Braves professional basketball team to San Diego, says the owner of the San Diego Sports Arena.

Peter Graham, formerly of Vancouver, made the statement after meeting for three hours with John Y. Brown, owner of the National Basketball Association club.

Slow Starts Hurt Mussels' Cause

By JIM CRERAR
Times Staff

Would a baseball team by any other name come up roses?

Look at it this way: The Mussels, Victoria's new entry in the Northwest League, are named after a type of bivalve which is not equipped to get off the mark quickly.

And after Tuesday night's 10-2 loss to Grays Harbor Loggers before a paid crowd of 305 at Royal Athletic Park, playing manager Jim Chapman must be wondering what's in a name.

For the sixth time in eight games so far this season, the Mussels fells behind early and stayed there.

"With a team like we have, we should be winning," Chapman said afterwards. "We've just got to get through the first innings. So far that's where we've been losing. When that happens, it takes so many things away from you. You can't hit and run. You can't steal. You've got to hope for the big inning."

It didn't come Tuesday after Grays Harbor took a 2-0 lead in the first inning and bumped it to 3-0 in the second, 5-1 in the fourth and 8-2 in the sixth.

The win gave the Loggers a split of their two-game series here and moved them back into a third-place tie with Victoria in the Northern Division. Both teams sport 3-4 won-lost records.

Mussels will try to improve on their mark tonight by sending righthander Don Rogelstad to the mound against Walla Walla Padres in the opener of another two-game set beginning at 7.

A check of the Mussels' first eight games shows they've gone ahead of their opponents in the early innings only twice. Significantly, they won both — Sunday and last Thursday against Bellingham Mariners. They faltered early in the other six games and lost five of them

That early-inning cushion was all lefthander Bill Demo needed Tuesday as he checked the Mussels on eight hits, one of them a sixth-inning solo homer by Mike Carey. Designated hitter Al Alpaugh singled in Carey for Mussels' other run in the fourth.

Demo, who walked three and struck out six, had a laborious evening. He threw 136 pitches.

Starter Bobby Watkins suffered his second loss as the Loggers clubbed three Victoria pitchers for 15 hits. The one that did the early damage was Jim Gattis' bases-empty blast in the first after Watkins had struck out the first two batters of the inning.

Watkins failed to last beyond the fourth, yielding to lefthander Scott Harding who in turn gave way to righthander Dale Mohorcic in the sixth.

Control wasn't a particular problem for Victoria pitchers, who collectively walked seven men. It was simply that the Loggers got out the lumber.

Catcher Bob Rasley drove in four runs with three hits, including a double, in four trips. Other three-for-four hitters were Steve Greene, with two doubles and an RBI, and Paul Stevens with two RBIs. Tim Tveit had a triple among his two hits and Rick Hill doubled for one of his two safeties.

Outfielders Paul Kirsch, with two doubles in four appearances, and Jim Thamann (two-for-four) accounted for half of Victoria's hits.

EXTRA BASES — Chapman continued to stress the positive after the game. "There'sone good thing tonight," he noted. "I played all nine innings." He was referring to his ejection from two previous games, one for arguing a Bellingham home run Sunday and the other for his part in a shoving match sparked by a pitch from Grays Harbor reliever John Harness that sailed behind Chapman's head Monday . . . Rogelstad didn't suit up Tuesday. He sat out a one-game susension and paid a $25 fine for bumping an umpire in Bellingham last week . . . Walla Walla's Randy Miller uncorked a wild pitch to allow Bellingham to chalk up a 6-5 victory while in Southern Division play, Eugene Emeralds struck for three runs in the bottom of the ninth to nip Boise 7-6 while Bend and Salem were tied 12-12 when darkness halted the game at Salem.

Ranjit Nearing Milestones

By BILL WALKER
Times Staff

There could be a milestone maker of more than passing interest at Memorial Arena tonight.

And, if it does happen, it couldn't be to a more deserving player.

When the Victoria Shamrocks go after their eighth straight Western Lacrosse Association victory over New Westminster Salmonbellies at 8 p.m. in Memorial Arena, the man to watch will be Ranjit Dillon of the Shamrocks.

The veteran defenceman — would you believe it, but Ranjit now is 34 — could reach an exalted position in the WLA. He could become only the third player in history to accumulate 700 assists.

Going into tonight's battle, Dillon has 697 assists , and there are only two players in history with more.

They are Paul Parnell, the former New Westminster star, with 880, and Wayne Goss, also of the Salmonbellies, who is still playing, and is just two shy of the 800 mark.

Dillon also is only two goals short of the 400 total.

And his overall point total is 398-697—1,095 and that is seventh best in the WHL archives and not too far behind another Victorian, Whitey Severson.

Severson holds down sixth place with 1,107 total points and Dillon conceivably could pass him before this season is out.

Parnell is the all-time leader and far in front with 1,801 points lifetime.

For Ranjit, either, or both, the milestones would be only fitting. For he long has been a standout.

- He was rookie-of-the-year in 1966;
- He won the league scoring championship (24-71—95) and with it the Denny Huddleston Trophy in 1967;
- He was selected the league's most outstanding player that same season;
- He was named to the first all-star team in 1967 and 1972;
- And he was the winner of the coveted Maitland Trophy — awarded to the player best displaying value to his team, assistance to minor lacrosse, and good sportsmanship — three times. Those honors came in 1968, '72 and '75.

Now for Ranjit — "700" — hopefully, here it comes.

Meanwhile, Ron MacNeil, Dillon and Charn Dhillon helped Shamrocks extend their first place lead with an 18-15 win over Vancouver Burrards on Tuesday night.

The victory puts Victoria five points ahead of Vancouver and Nanaimo Timbermen, who are tied for second place.

MacNeil scored five goals and four assists to lead the Victoria attack, while Dillon added two goals and five assists and Dhillon got a goal and five assists.

Larry Bell, Rick Baker and Gerry Cadwallader also had two-goal performances for the Shamrocks. Singles were added by Joe McCrea, Gord Lyons, Art Webster and Jeevan Dillon.

Rico Bellusci led Vancouver with four goals and six assists. John Krgovich added three goals and Eric Otterstrom scored a pair.

Single goals went to Ron Pinder, Ward Sanderson, Joe Marrello, Dave Tasker, Bill Rawson and Dan Perreault.

Larry Smeltzer blocked 37 shots for Victoria while Darryl Sauve and Brian Celli combined for 24 Vancouver saves.

Victoria led 6-4 after the first period and the teams went into the final frame tied 11-11. Vancouver was given 33 of 58 penalty minutes.

Fisher Returns With Old Talent

By MAX LOW
Times Staff

He's bearded this time, but Gentleman Chip Fisher is just as cool as he was back in 1974 when he won the B.C. Open tennis championship.

A layoff of almost two years hasn't hurt his game, as Chip indicated Tuesday when, after battling through three rounds of qualifying play over the weekend just to get into the 32-man main draw, he stunned fourth-seeded Emilio Montano of Mexico, 6-0, 7-5, to reach the last 16 in the 80th Open.

Only a handful of spectators at the Racquet Club of Victoria watched the classic battle between contrasting styles and temperaments.

Tall, graceful and serving and volleying beautifully, Fisher broke the stocky, volatile Mexican's service three times to win the first set easily. The first time he did it, Montano smashed a ball in anger into the netting.

Things just got rapidly worse for the Mexican, whose game is more suited to slower clay courts. As Fisher continued to serve well and move in to the net so quickly, Montano complained bitterly about the slick surface of the courts.

"What a surface!" he yelled at the spectators after losing one rally. "It's so fast. It's not any fun."

But still he didn't give in though it certainly looked all over for him when Fisher was one set up and led 5-3 in the second with his own serve to come.

Fighting back gamely, Montano survived five match points to break Fisher's serve and make it 5-4. He held his own service and suddenly it was 5-5 but Fisher served well and then cracked the Mexican to win it 7-5.

And when it was all over, the man whose parents named him Steven Fisher at birth but decided moments later they liked the name Chip better, admitted he was glad to be back in the game he loves.

"After I won on the Pacific Satellite Circuit here in 1974, I played professionally in Europe until late 1976," Chip explained. "But I started to become frustrated with tennis so at the end of 76 I went into business (not tennis-related) with my father."

He felt the urge to get back into the game, though, and started playing again in February.

"It all boils down to money, of course," Chip told me with a grin. "If you play well and win you can stay in the game. If you don't win anything you can't pay the bills!"

Now 25 and playing as well as ever, Chip Fisher must stand a pretty good chance at the men's singles title and some of the $15,000 prize money in the Open, which is the first stop on the new six-tourney Challengers Circuit sponsored by American Express. It runs all this week with finals Sunday at the Racquet Club and the next stop is the Prairie Open in Calgary July 1 to 9.

It's a tough field, though, and Fisher faces strong opposition from players like top-seeded Australian Bill Lloyd, who crushed fellow-countryman Wayne Cowley, 6-0, 6-0, Tuesday.

There were nine Canadians in the main draw but by the end of the first day's play that was whittled down to four.

John Picken of Burnaby scored a fine 7-6, 6-3 win over American John Eagleton; Dale Power of Toronto ousted New Zealander Peter Hampton, 7-5, 6-1; Richard Legendre of Quebec eliminated another New Zealander Malcolm Elley, 7-6, 6-2; and Nick Mohtadi of Calgary upset higher-ranked, former-Victorian Don McCormick, 6-3, 2-6, 6-4.

Women swung into action today with the first round of the 16-player singles draw.

Barlow Bows To Australian

LONDON (AP) — Chris Evert and Evonne Goolagong made short work of their second-round opponents at the Wimbledon tennis championships today.

Evert, a two-time Wimbledon champion from the United States, played with clocklike precision to oust Sweden's Helena Anliot 6-1, 6-0.

Anliot hit flowing groundstrokes and often varied the pace intelligently, but at the end, all she had to show for her efforts was 22 points and one game. Everything she did, Evert, the top seed, did a little better.

Goolagong, seeded third from Australia, beat American Lele Forood 6-0, 6-2, the opening set lasting just 15 minutes and the entire match just 42 minutes.

Goolagong won the championship here in 1971 and has been runner-up three times, once to Evert. Evert, who won in 1974 and 1976, had a bye in the first round. Goolagong had beaten Frenchwoman Brigitte Simon in the first round.

In another early result today, Wendy Barlow of Victoria, playing at Wimbledon for the first time, dropped a 6-1, 6-3 decision to Helen Gourlay Cawley of Australia.

Defending champion Bjorn Borg will continue his course toward a third consecutive title, trying to forget his nightmare start Tuesday

The imperturbable Borg, playing well below form, barely survived his opening match on the centre court on Monday against big-hitting American left-hander Victor Amaya.

Borg, who played devastating tennis to win the Italian and French championships in recent weeks, eventually triumphed over Amaya in five sets.

The three past champions who bowed out were Americans Arthur Ashe and Stan Smith and Czechoslovakia's Jan Kodes.

Judgement Day Coming Closer

OUTDOORS

Some rambling notes along the trail:

This development-oriented provincial government of ours is really starting to get me down . . . In every case of industry vs. environment to date, they've taken the development approach . . . It shows in the unfolding sagas of Tsitika and Stein watersheds, the Akamina-Kishinia wilderness and the Cowichan River estuary . . . And it's particularly evident while they're blatantly ramming through the new Forest Act against mounting opposition . . . Working behind the scenes, even the ministers who should be supporting pro-environment issues either do nothing or actively campaign for the opposite side . . . The only good thing arising from their actions is a feeling that they're slowly but surely hanging themselves . . . And the execution might come next year.

Speaking about the Cowichan estuary, federal fisheries minister Romeo LeBlanc has underscored his opposition to further development in the area in a letter to Cowichan-Malahat MLA Barbara Wallace . . . He states that his department supports the status quo recommendations reached by the first task force and interprets this stand as opposing further encroachment "on the highly productive fish habitat aquatic base and economic well-being of dependent recreational and commercial fisheries in the Cowichan estuary" . . . "It is my position, therefore, that further loss of significantly productive fish habitat in the Cowichan estuary shall not be permitted. This will be reflected in the position that my regional fisheries representative on on the current task force will be advocating."

"Protests against nuclear power are apparently generating sympathy with the general public . . . A recent Louis Harris poll in the United States showed a significant change in the attitude toward nuclear power generation . . . Although most of the public favored speeding up nuclear plant construction 47 per cent to 34 per cent, the margin is considerably less than the 61 per cent in favor-24 per cent against figure in a poll taken one year ago . . . In addition, the public favored encouragement of quick development of solar energy 80 per cent to eight per cent.

It's a little out of date but reflects a continuing trend . . . Federal fisheries has released some figures gathered in a survey covering the year 1975 showing sports fishing is big business in Canada . . . During 1975, 6.4 million people of all ages went sports-fishing in Canada . . . 5.4 million were Canadians and the rest visiting anglers . . . These anglers fished 75 million days and caught nearly a quarter of a billion fish, with brook trout, perch, pickerel and northern pike topping the list of landings . . . Canadian anglers in that year owned 1.8 million recreational boats with a market value in excess of $2.1 billion . . . The fish-seekers spent nearly $900 million on food, lodging, transportation and related fishing expenses and invested another $940 million on major items such as boats, motors and camping gear.

AHL TEAM IN MONCTON

MONCTON, N.B. (CP) — An American Hockey League franchise will be operated here next season with players coming from both Toronto Maple Leafs and Chicago Blackhawks of the National Hockey League.

THREE-CORNERED BASKETBALL TRADE

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Kansas City Kings, Denver Nuggets and Los Angeles Lakers have completed a three-team National Basketball Association trade involving four players.

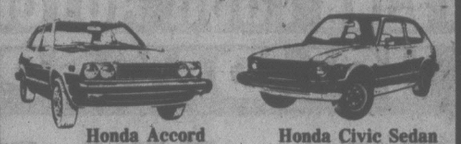

Kansas City sent guard Ron Boone and a 1979 second-round draft pick to Los Angeles. Denver sent a 1979 second-round choice to the Lakers. Los Angeles sent guard Charley Scott to Denver and Denver sent forward Darnell Hillman and guard Mike Evans to Kansas City.

Boone, who will be 32 in September, is a 10-year NBA and American Basketball Association veteran from Idaho State. He was selected by Kansas City in the ABA dispersal draft of 1976.

Helman, 28, has played five NBA seasons and two seasons in the ABA.

Evans, a 1978 graduate of Kansas State University and the all-time Big Eight career scoring leader with 2,115 points, will be a rookie this season.

Weary Nettles Snaps Boston Streak

By The Associated Press

New York Yankees were beat but not defeated.

"I was as tired as I've ever been," said Yankees third baseman Graig Nettles. "I was in the dugout and said, 'Let's win this thing.'"

Nettles came to the plate with one out and Roy White on first base in the bottom of the 14th inning to face the fifth Boston Red Sox pitcher, Dick Drago.

He lined his 13th home run of the season into the right field bleachers to give the Yankees a 6-4 victory in a 4-hour, eight-minute game that extended into the early morning hours.

Nettles' homer not only scored White, but it also snapped a five-game Boston winning streak and cut the Red Sox' lead in the American League East to 8½ games.

The Yankees got Reggie Jackson to second base via a walk and a sacrifice bunt in the 11th inning. Pinch hitter Jim Spencer then lined a single to right, but Dwight Evans' perfect throw to catcher Carlton Fisk cut down Jackson at the plate.

Ron Guidry started the game for the Yankees and, after leaving in the seventh with none out and the bases loaded, was in serious danger of losing his first game after 12 consecutive victories.

Guidry actually left with a 3-2 lead, but when reliever Rich Gossage yielded a two-run single to Rick Burleson, both runs were charged to Guidry and the Yanks trailed 4-3.

In other AL games Tuesday night, the reviving Toronto Blue Jays swept a pair from Baltimore Orioles, 6-2 and 9-8; Milwaukee Brewers downed Minnesota Twins 13-6; Detroit Tigers clobbered Cleveland Indians 6-1; California Angels nipped Kansas City Royals 5-4; Texas Rangers trimmed Oakland A's 3-1 and Chicago White Sox defeated Seattle Mariners 10-6.

While Nettles' provided some timely hitting for the Yankees, over in the National League Joe Altobelli, manager of San Francisco Giants, pulled some surprising-yet-timely managerial moves.

Altobelli, who has his surprising Giants riding atop the National League West, pinch-hit for a player with four hits and got a grand slam homer out of his replacement. He also got some fine pitching from Vida Blue and that resulted in a 9-1 victory over San Diego Padres.

"When things are going good for you, they're going good for you," said the Padres manager Roger Craig, shaking his head.

Altobelli made his usually astute moves Tuesday night, but the one that shocked just about everyone was when he put Jack Clark up to hit for Terry Whitfield in the seventh inning. Whitfield had gone 4-for-4 up until that point.

In other National League games, Houston Astros beat Cincinnati Reds 7-4; Los Angeles Dodgers blanked Atlanta Braves 3-0; Philadelphia Phillies edged Montreal Expos 1-0; New York Mets stopped Chicago Cubs 7-2 and St. Louis Cardinals took a double-header from Pittsburgh Pirates, 2-0 and 6-1.

Dave McKay and Alan Ashby knocked in two runs each, and John Mayberry hit his 13th homer to make Dave Lemancyzk, 2-9, the winner for Toronto in the opener.

The Blue Jays scored a run in the bottom of the ninth on pinch hitter Sam Ewing's RBI single to win the night-cap and hand the Orioles their sixth straight loss. Victor Cruz, 1-0, who got a save in the first game, was the winner of the second. Rico Carty had four RBI, three of them with a homer.

WILLIAMS CONTINUES WITH EXPOS

MONTREAL (CP) — Dick Williams has signed to manage Montreal Expos for two years after the completion of the 1978 season, the National League baseball club announced.

"We've got a winning combination and we're keeping it," said club president John McHale, referring to Williams, 49, on his left and general manager Charlie Fox on his right.

The Expos have a 37-35 won-lost record in 1978, for third place and just two games behind the East Division-leading Phillies.

"I've been a vagabond for almost 10 years, living in Florida, Montreal, Boston, Oakland, Anaheim and Texas," Williams said. "I'm very pleased with the way things have worked out."

Martin Staying

NEW YORK (AP) — Billy Martin will remain as manager of New York Yankees this year.

George Steinbrenner, owner of the American League baseball club, confirmed Martin's position after he and the fiery manager spent 2½ hours discussing points of controversy late Monday.

"This should end the speculation that has been developing of late concerning Billy's job," Steinbrenner said.

After losing two of three recent games to the Red Sox in Boston, Steinbrenner and club president Al Rosen had expressed dissatisfaction with both the performance and the attitude of the World Series champions.

"The manager is responsible for winning," Rosen said at the time. "He must always be ready for the ax if it falls."

Steinbrenner said at the time only two players on the roster—first baseman Chris Chambliss and third baseman Graig Nettles—were playing up to their potential.

That left the impression that all other players were falling below their capacity. Martin seemed to be given the blame for allowing this situation to exist.

However, Rosen, who Steinbrenner said would make the decision on whether the manager leaves or stays, said he felt Martin should be given an opportunity to turn the team around.

"We can't get too far behind," Rosen said. "New York has a discriminating bunch of fans. They want winners. We feel obligated to give them a winning team."

The announcement also said pitching coach Art Fowler would continue in that capacity.

Kenyan Star Posts Fourth World Mark

OSLO, Norway (AP) — With a furious finish, Henry Rono of Kenya highlighted the annual Bislet Games track and field meet Tuesday night, establishing his fourth world record this season in winning the 3,000 metres in seven minutes, 32.1 seconds.

That lowered by 3.1 seconds the old record of 7:35.2 set by Brendan Foster of Britain on Aug. 3, 1974.

Rono outclassed a strong field as Suleiman Nyambui of Tanzania finished second in 7:40.3, Nick Rose of Britain was third in 7:40.4, Rod Dixon of New Zealand was fourth in 7:41.1 and Knut Kvalheim of Norway finished fifth in 7:44.3.

It was the 27th world record established at Oslo's Bislet Stadium.

"The Bislet Recortan track was fine, the weather conditions excellent and the crowd marvelous," Rono, a student at Washington State University, said after the race.

"This is not my favorite distance. I like the longer races better, but I felt fine and went after that old record. I think it would be possible to push the 3,000 metres record to about 7:29 if I'm pressed."

His compatriot, Richard Tuwei, led the race for the first 1,200 metres in 3:04.5 before Rono took the lead and raced away from the rest of the field. He passed the 1,000-metre mark in 2:33.5 and 2,000 metres in 5:04.5.

Earlier this season, Rono set world records for the 5,000 and 10,000 metres as well as the 3,000-metre steeplechase.

Wilson Waigwa of Kenya won a blistering mile in 3:53.2, edging out Filbert Bayi of Tanzania, the world record holder, who was clocked in 3:53.5, and Steve Scott of the United States, who was timed in 3:53.8.

Grete Waitz of Norway lowered her own Norwegian and Scandinavian 3,000-metre record for women, winning the event in 8:32.1. It was the second-best time ever recorded. Ludmila Bragina of the Soviet Union holds the world mark at 8:27.1.

Loa Olafsson of Denmark was second in 8:42.3 and Jan Merrill of the United States was third in 2:42.6.

Greg Joy of Vancouver and Dwight Stones of the United States both cleared seven feet, 4¼ inches in the high jump, but Joy won with fewer misses.

Stingers Top T-Men

NANAIMO — Victoria Strathcona Stingers turned on the scoring power Ruesday night to trample Nanaimo Junior Timbermen 24-9 in a Vancouver Island Junior 'B' Lacrosse League game.

Kevin Kennedy and Forrest Owens were the big gunners for the Stingers, Kennedy scoring five goals and earning four assists and Owens collecting five tallies and three assists.

Leader on attack for the T-Men was Lance Blanco, with two goals and four assists.

Tribe Makes Change

CLEVELAND (AP) — Cleveland Indians made room for newly-acquired pitcher Paul Reuschel by dropping pitcher Al Fitzmorris on Tuesday from the American League baseball club's active roster.

BRILL AND NEILSON ATHENS WINNERS

ATHENS (Reuter) — Carmen Ionesco of Montreal won two events and Scott Neilson of New Westminster and Debbie Brill of Aldergrove took one each at an international track meet Tuesday, the first of two days.

Ionesco took the women's discus with a throw of 59.10 metres, beating team-mate Lucette Moreau of Montreal, with a toss of 54 metres.

In the shot put, Ionesco again beat Moreau with a heave of 16.20 metres to 15.44. Neilson won the hammer throw with a toss of 71.66 metres, beating M. Bianchini of Italy who had a throw of 70.04 metres.

Brill won the high jump with a leap of 1.87 metres, while Pandelitsa Panayotou of Greece was second with a mark of 1.73.

Rads Charge Past Queens

Dairy Queen developed a defensive leak Tuesday at Lambrick Park and Capital Radiators steamed past the Queens to grab a 10-7 Victoria Senior Amateur Baseball League victory.

Fielding a flock of rookies in their first season in the league, the Queens appeared poised to nail down their third win of the campaign when they started the bottom half of the sixth inning with a 6-3 lead.

Then the roof fell in on the dairy squad as the Rads rambled for seven runs, getting their winning tallies on a two-run error with two men out in the frame.

With one out and three Rads on base, Randy Price popped out and things were looking brighter for the Queens. Then Dave Morgan, playing his first game of the season, hit a routine bouncer to shortstop Gary White. Gary's toss to second-baseman George Fritz was high and two men scampered across the plate.

Two are Unbeaten

Tom McKeachie and Chuck Davies of Victoria and John Green and Mike Belton of Oak Bay are the only unbeaten twosomes following second-round play in the Vancouver Island pairs lawn bowling championships Tuesday at Victoria West.

McKeachie and Davies have a 2-0 record in the six-team side of the 11-team affair after beating George Sage and Bill Barr of Burnside 20-9. Green and Belton matched that record by dropping Ed Brown and George Konchak of the host club, 19-14.

Jim Allan and Alec Reid of Victoria West downed clubmates Bill Cruickshank and Paul Jenkins 24-12 in another contest.

In the five-team section, Glen Taylor and Rollie Mercer of Burnside downed Darrel Prezeau and Bill Vandruten of Victoria 17-8 and John McMillan and Syd Smethurst of Burnside defeated Jim McGregor Sr. and Jim McGregor Jr. of Victoria West, 15-12.

Play continues tonight at 6:30.

NOTICE TO SAANICH DOG OWNERS

As a convenience to dog owners and to provide employment opportunities, a house-to-house dog licence canvass has commenced in the Municipality of Saanich.

Canvassers are provided with dog licence tags, receipt books and identification and are authorized to collect fees and issue licences at the door. You are requested to immediately affix the dog licence and advised to retain your receipt. Your co-operation when the canvasser calls will be appreciated.

The Animals Bylaw No. 2893 reads in part as follows:

"Any person who owns, possesses or harbours any dog over the age of six months shall obtain a licence therefor in accordance with the provisions of this bylaw on or before the first day of February in each year, provided however, that if he becomes the owner, possessor or harbourer of a dog after the first day of February in any year, he shall obtain a licence therefor forthwith."

A dog licence is valid for the calendar year in which it is obtained.

A portion of the fee schedule from the said bylaw is as follows:

"(1) for every dog over the age of six months:
(a) The sum of $5.00 for each male dog.
(b) The sum of $5.00 for each spayed female dog provided, however, that a certificate from a veterinary surgeon to the effect that a female has been spayed shall be accepted in lieu of the licence fee for the calendar year in which the same was spayed.
(c) The sum of $15.00 for each female dog which is not spayed."

For further particulars, reference should be made to Bylaw No. 2893.

Home Run Burst Fails To Help Sooke Cause

Victoria Athletics extended a shutout string to 14 innings Tuesday while blanking Juan de Fuca Builders 2-0 in a Stuffy McGinnis Men's Softball League game at Central Park.

In the other game, at Sooke Athletic Park, Elks posted a 9-7 win over Sooke Merchants despite a home run spree by the home club.

Ray Beveridge pitched a four-hitter and scored what proved to be the winning run for Athletics while recording his second straight shutout.

Beveridge had pitched five innings of a 1-0 win over Ingraham Hotel on Sunday. He scored the only run he needed by singling, stealing second and scoring on a two-out double by Mike Wallace.

Elks came up with 11 hits, including one home run by Jim Boyd, while Sooke batters connected for seven hits, including homers by Bob Wilson, Norn Goudie and Bob Butterworth.

At Hyacinth Park, Mavis Underwood pitched out of trouble in every inning as Butler Brothers edged MacDonald's Furniture 1-0 and Victoria Athletics topped Strawberry Vale Juniors 11-6 in. Victoria Senior Women's League play.

Underwood pitched a six-hitter while striking out five and issuing no walks. She prevented runners from reaching home from third base in four of the innings.

Josephine Dick scored the lone run on an error for Butlers after cracking a two-out triple in the second inning.

Maggi Radcliffe set the pace for Athletics with a homer and two singles.

In Heywood Men's League action, Bill Clifford hit a two-run homer in the fifth inning and Marv Carver scattered six hits as Capital Builders defeated Victoria Athletics 5-3 at Heywood Avenue Park.

Paul Kraeling and John Thompson hit run-scoring singles for Builders and Jim Iverson bashed a two-run homer for Athletics.

Creery Fares Best

RICHMOND — Mike Creery, who competes for Lions Gate Roadrunners in Vancouver, came up with the best performance among Victoria athletics entered in the 800 metres during the fourth of eight nights comprising the Adidas Grand Prix each Tuesday at Minoru Park.

Creery finished second in the pre-masters race (30-39) in a time of two minutes, five seconds.

Terry Bateman of the Victoria Flying "Y" placed third in the juvenile boys event in 2:05.4 and clubmate Garth Ball was third in the masters (40 and over) race in 2:11.1.

Earthquakes Release Mitic

SAN JOSE (AP) — Ilija Mitic, the North American Soccer League's all-time leading scorer, has been released by San Jose Earthquakes, who obtained Doug Wark, 26-year-old forward from Chicago Sting in a straight cash transaction.

Mitic, 37, had scored 35 goals and 16 assists in 67 games since he joined the Earthquakes May 1, 1975. In his NASL career, Mitic had 239 points in 166 games.

FOR NARROW VICTORY OVER ROADRUNNERS

Macs Need Rally

Victoria McDonalds staged a rally in the last period Tuesday at Esquimalt Sports Centre to eke out a narrow 14-12 decision over Richmond Roadrunners in a Western Canada Junior Lacrosse League contest.

Down by period scores of 4-2 and 9-8, the Macs' capped their surge when Murray McLaren tied the count 12-12 at 17:35 and Tarey Pollock scored what proved to be the winning tally less than a minute later.

The turning point came in the second period after a scuffle involving Pollock and Rob Grant. Grant received a two-minute penalty for high-sticking, five minutes each for fighting and hitting another player's face mask as well as a 10-minute misconduct. Pollock was only assessed a five-minute fighting major.

After that, Victoria scored three unanswered goals and never looked back.

Mark Roberts scored three times to lead the Bakers and Paul Michael contributed two goals.

Leading scorers for Richmond were Mike Gillis and Mike Amos, each with two.

Dave Lemire made 28 stops in goal for Richmond while Bill Thomas and Mike Duch combined for 36 saves in the Victoria nets.

PROBATION OUT FOR TEACHERS

Greater Victoria school trustees have flatly refused support to Langley School District's policy of putting beginning teachers on probation.

Trustee Carol Pickup said she would not endorse the request to back Langley's stand because it contradicts the law.

She said Langley is noted around the province as the most backward board in its attitude toward employees.

Langley school board has been in conflict with the education ministry and the B.C. Teachers Federation for several months since it started putting teachers new to the district on probation.

In a letter to Education Minister Pat McGeer, Langley board chairman B.K. Westwood asks for provincial legislation automatically placing new teachers on probation for two years.

According to Westwood, the ministry has the legislation sitting on the shelf.

Westwood said more emphasis should be placed on determining the ability of teachers before granting them the protection of tenure.

"Once tenure is granted, elected representatives find it almost impossible to prove incompetence which is necessary to remove a bad teacher from the system," her letter stated.

A copy of that letter was included in Westwood's appeal to the Greater Victoria school board.

Five-Year Budget 'Invalid', McGeer Told by Schools

The five-year budget forecast requested by Education Minister Pat McGeer from the Greater Victoria school district may not be completed by his Aug. 15 deadline.

Trustees have decided to table McGeer's request for five-year budget projections until they can figure out how to comply with the demand.

The recommendation to wait was also made by the B.C. School Trustees Association and the associations of school superintendents and secretary-treasurers.

Those three organizations informed trustees in a letter that a joint committee has been formed to study McGeer's request.

Trustees were asked not to complete two information forms sent by the ministry until the committee had completed its report.

McGeer wants a projection of the district's operating budget over the next five years to help him plan ministry education spending.

In a letter to board chairman Susan Brice, he asks trustees to complete the attached expenditure forms by Aug. 15.

All other B.C. school districts have been asked for the same information.

McGeer said district administrators could compile the information this summer while working on the 1979 provisional budget.

"I hope they can complete the information being requested by this letter without a major additional effort, although I recognize that smome thought will have to be given to long-range factors." McGeer's letter said.

It said since school budgets, which totalled $1 billion last year, form a large part of the public expenditure the five-year projections will help him control costs.

But the superintendents, trustees and secretary-treasurer's associations say the matter is much more complicated than McGeer thinks.

They indicated in their letter that some kind of joint approach must be taken to avoid "invalid comparisions" between school districts.

The letter also pointed out discrepancies between enrolment figures supplied by the ministry and the individual board projections.

The ministry forms include factors which the boards cannot predict and over which they have no control such as inflation and arbitarated salary increases.

Calling the projections "the final straw" trustee Mark Fisher said that since school boards have no control over the province's financing formula, any information they put together will have little effect on rising school costs.

'Land of the Damned' Receives a Rare Visit

The writer, a former newspaper reporter in Alaska, travelled to the Soviet island of Sakhalin this spring, delivering millions of dollars in computers and other equipment for processing geological data. The crew's interpreter said the Americans were among the first to visit Sakhalin since the Russians took control of the island after the Second World War.

IUZHNO-SAKHALINSK, U.S.S.R. (AP) — Georgi Swichtchov smiled and told jokes as the Hercules cargo plane approached the biggest community on the Russian island of Sakhalin. It's an island rarely seen by foreigners since the Russians took control after the defeat of Japan in the Second World War.

After a bumpy ride to our parking spot — the runway was made of large blocks of concrete instead of pavement — the plane was surrounded by guards. But there were no signs of guns.

We had stopped en route from Anchorage to refuel at Kushiro, on the Japanese island of Hokkaido. We also picked up Swichtchov and fellow-pilot Kourko Kanstantin for the 86-minute last leg of our flight.

Swichtchov, the younger of the two men, told us he had guided the U.S. presidential aircraft, Air Force One, to landings when former presidents Gerald Ford and Richard Nixon visited Moscow.

Our hosts took us — the crew of the third and last Alaska International Air flight carrying computer gear to Sakhalin — to the airport terminal for lunch.

We were then taken to the heart of this city of 120,000, travelling along a wide boulevard that ended at the new soccer stadium, an arena with a seating capacity of 10,000.

Our interpreter, who said, "Call me Jane," told us there are 22 Japanese families on the island and "all of them have become Soviet citizens." The southern half of the island, called Karafuto by the Japanese, was occupied by Japan until the end of the war.

The island's northern tip is at the end of the Amur River, which serves as the Sino-Soviet border along much of its length. The island, 40 kilometres north across La Perouse Strait from the Japanese island of Hokkaido, also is in a strategic location for monitoring radio communications in Japan.

Antennas could be seen in this city, and a pair of radar domes crowned a nearby mountain.

From 1881 until 1906, the island, known as "the land of the damned," was a Russian penal colony for murderers, robbers and political exiles.

In 1890, Anton Chekhov visited Sakhalin. He claimed to have spoken to ever resident in preparaton for his only non-fiction work, The Island: A Journey to Sakhalin. He told a friend in 1895: "I have seen Ceylon, which is paradise, and Sakhalin, which is hell."

In 1905, Japan defeated Russia in the Russo-Japanese war and occupied the southern half of the island.

The Soviet Union regained the southern half of Sakhalin in 1945 as part of the agreements of the Yalta conference. That pact also granted the Soviet Union the Kurile Islands and an occupation zone in Korea in exchange for agreeing to declare war on Japan within three months of Germany's surrender in the Second World War.

French Tongue Slowly Dying

COQUITLAM (CP) — Mass is still delivered in French and a stranger might still be addressed in French on entering a store, but the language and culture in Maillardville east of Vancouver are dying as urbanization transforms the area and families move on.

Wilfrid Dicaire and his family came here by train from Quebec in 1909 with about 30 other French-speaking families. Brought to British Columbia by the Fraser Mills Co. to work in its lumber mill, they were the founders of the French-speaking community in this municipality.

Dicaire, now 76, doesn't think the French language and culture will disappear here.

Although Dicaire has retained his native language, only two of his six children speak French fluently. None of his five grandchildren speak the language.

Romeo Paquette, education officer for the Caisse Populaire (credit union) du Maillardville, said Maillardville is "on the deep end" as far as survival of the language is concerned.

"French is sustained more by new people moving into the community," he said. "The influx is the only thing putting off the end. People are buying homes in surrounding areas such as Haney and Surrey. There's no promise of a bright future."

Although there are no population figures for Maillardville, in 1971 in Coquitlam there were 3,335 persons with French as their mother tongue. By 1976 the number had dropped to 2,515.

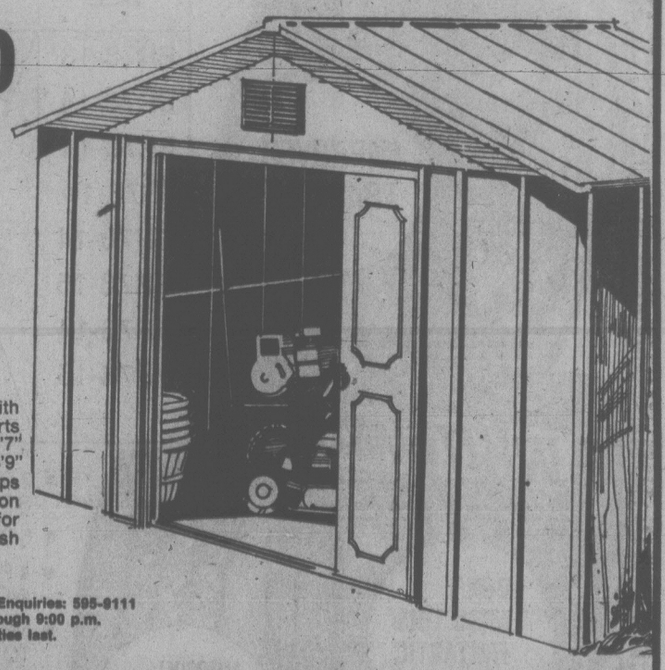

According to the 1971 census, British Columbia has the largest assimilation rate and the least organized francophone community in Canada.

Greenhouses in Alta.?

WITH SOLAR ENERGY

BROOKS, Alta. (CP) — Alberta could become a key source of Canada's vegetable supply in five to 10 years if provincial experiments in the south-eastern community are successful.

Scientists are studying the possibilities of large-scale indoor market gardens using solar energy or waste heat from other sources.

"This is where it's at," said Darrel Shaw, greenhouse specialist at the horticultural research centre in Brooks.

The scientists, who have built an alternate-energy greenhouse, say gas or electrical heat is cheaper now, but rising energy costs could mean a bright future in Alberta for unconventional greenhouse projects.

They say market gardeners might move their businesses to Alberta if the price of electricity and natural gas—the usual sources of greenhouse heat—goes up substantially.

"Over the last five years we've had about a five-per-cent increase in the industry on a square-footage basis," said Shaw. "We're looking at the potential of increasing 100 to 200 per cent over a very few years."

The centre estimates there are about 90 acres of greenhouses operating in Alberta, producing about $12 million worth of vegetables, potted plants and flowers a year.

The low figure can be attributed to the high initial cost of getting into a business which cannot guarantee a good return.

Despite the costs and the need for expertise, many alternate-energy greenhouse projects are under way, said Dr. John Wiebe, research centre director.

Most of the projects are put together by groups with supplies of waste heat they want to use. One project is a one-acre tomato and cucumber patch attached to a gas compressor station at Princess, northeast of Brooks.

The greenhouse, the brainchild of Alberta Gas Trunk Line Co. Ltd.'s energy conservation section, uses exhaust from the compressor station for heat.

An expensive exchange system had to be installed to make the exhaust into usable heat.

"The capital investment involved in this is high and the operating costs are high," said Shaw. "Waste heat is not necessarily free heat."

The greenhouse will operate as a pilot project for two years.

One project at a Calgary Power installation on Lake Wabamun, 70 kilometres west of Edmonton, proved that waste heat can be expensive. Researchers calculated the heat, taken from power generators, could cost 300 to 800 per cent more than conventional sources.

The project ended last fall after about three years.

WOOD TO HEAT SHOPS CENTRE

WILLIAMSTOWN, Vt. (UPI) — Finishing touches are being made on what is believed to be the first wood-heated shopping centre in the country.

Developer Ronald Saldi said Friday he estimates his wood burning furnace will save him $15,000 to $20,000 in annual heating costs that otherwise would be spent on oil.

"And I won't have to worry four years down the road if there's no oil around," he said.

The furnace will provide space and hot water heat to the shopping centre's nine shops.

The L-shaped centre, scheduled to open Aug. 1, cost $450,000 to build and occupies 26,000 square feet, Saldi said.

Based on conversations with engineers, Saldi said he believes his shopping centre is the first to be heated by wood.

"To my knowledge, it's the first," he said.

Action Packed Royal Visit

OTTAWA (CP) — Queen Elizabeth, Prince Philip and their two youngest sons have planned an action-packed Canadian summer holiday that will start July 26 in St. John's, Nfld. and end in Edmonton, where the Royal Family will see top athletes of the Commonwealth countries compete.

The Royal Family will tour Newfoundland and Saskatchewan before going to Edmonton, where Queen Elizabeth will open the Commonwealth Games Aug. 3.

The itinerary, released Monday by Prime Minister Trudeau's office, is studded with visits to small towns. The tour will include an address to the nation by the Queen at a dinner to be given by the prime minister Aug. 5 in Edmonton.

The Queen and 14-year-old Prince Edward are to return to England Aug. 6. Prince Philip and 18-year-old Prince Andrew plan to visit British Columbia Aug. 7 and 8 before returning to Edmonton for the final days of the Commonwealth Games.

Prince Philip and Prince Andrew are to return to the United Kingdom Aug. 13 after Prince Philip officially closes the Games Aug. 12.

The Royal Family will spend July 26, 27 and 28 in St. John's, Deer Lake and Corner Brook, Nfld. On the evening of July 28, they are to fly to Regina.

They will travel by train July 29 to the Saskatchewan towns of Fort Qu'Appelle, Balcarres, Melville and Yorkton, returning to Regina that evening.

On July 30, they will go to Moose Jaw for a church service and Moose Jaw's 75th anniversary celebration. Later that day they will go to Saskatoon and the next day to Lloydminster and Edmonton.

The prime minister's office said in a news release that Prince Edward and Prince Andrew will participate in some, but not all, of the official ceremonies with their parents.

On Aug. 1, Queen Elizabeth and Prince Philip are to appear in Grande Prairie, Alta. for a lunch given by Premier Peter Lougheed. From there, they will go to Peace River and Lac Cardinal Park, returning later that night to Edmonton.

Continuing their Alberta tour Aug. 2, the Queen and Prince Philip will go to St. Paul and Vegreville, where they will take a train to Mundare, Chipman, Lamont, Bruderheim and Fort Saskatchewan.

On Aug. 3, the family will travel to Edmonton for the opening of the Commonwealth Games, where they will spend the following two days meeting the athletes and watching competition.

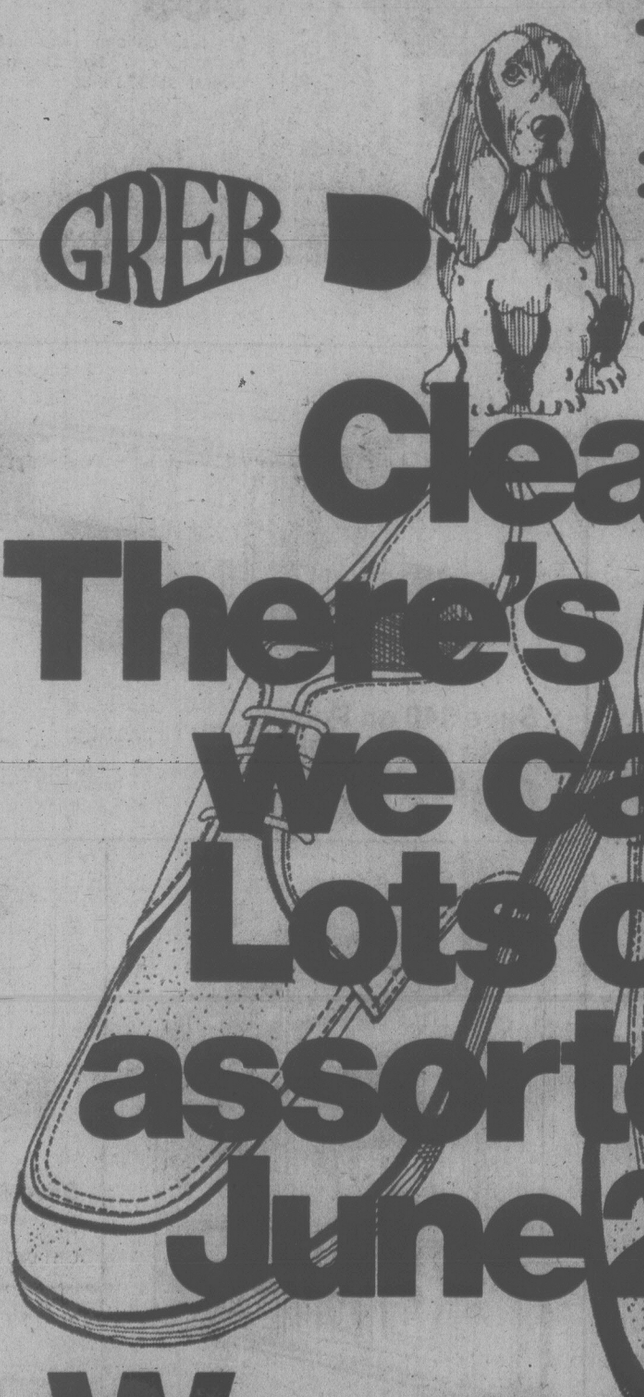

Prince Philip and Prince Andrew will take a side trip to Fort Edmonton Aug. 3 for a reception.

The family has been invited to attend a dinner given by Prime Minister Trudeau Aug. 5. The Queen is to make her speech to the nation at approximately 11:30 p.m. EDT.

The prime minister's office said Prince Philip and Prince Andrew plan a private visit to B.C. Aug. 7 and 8 and they will return to Edmonton Aug. 9.

Trustees 'Muzzle' Motions Defeated

Two bylaw amendments Trustee John Young said were designed to muzzle free speech have been defeated by Greater Victoria school board.

Young said the absence of two trustees contributed to the success of his move to defeat the motions.

The first amendment, proposed by Trustee Peter Yorke, would have given trustees during in-camera sessions the right to restrict information discussed in those meetings from becoming public.

Young said the amendment contravenes the Public Schools Act and he intends to reveal any part of an in-camera meeting he felt the public should know.

"There's too much secrecy at the federal, provincial and municipal level," Young said.

He said free speech is the essence of democracy and used that argument to oppose the second bylaw amendment, made by Trustee Bud Smith who was absent.

This amendment recommended moving the five-minute speaking period allowed each trustee near the beginning of regular meetings to the end of the agenda.

Trustee Peter Dorazio said he couldn't believe what he was hearing.

"It sounds like we're in Nazism somewhere. The amendment is a true and honest attempt to get down to the guts of the system."

He said the amendment was proposed so trustees could discuss the business of administering the district first and personal views later.

Both amendments were defeated by the negative votes of trustees Young, Carol Pickup and Mary Breer.

Commodity Tax Hearings Slated

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons public accounts committee decided Tuesday to hold hearings this summer into the latest set of proposals for reforming the government's $6.2-billion-a-year system of commodity taxes.

ROBERT KAPLAN

Commodity taxes are little understood, but virtually every Canadians bears the cost of them and they are a basic revenue producer for the federal treasury. They bring in the same amount of money for the federal government as it gets from corporation taxes.

There are three elements to commodity taxes:

— A 12 per cent general sales tax imposed on goods made in Canada or imported, with certain exceptions, like construction goods that are taxed at five per cent;

— Excise taxes of various rates on commodities like Jewellery, wine, tobacco products and gasoline;

— Excise duties at varying rates applied against domestically made beer, alcohol and tobacco.

Currently, these levies are imposed at the manufacturers level for domestically made goods and at the time of import for foreign goods.

A study group made up of federal revenue and finance officials has recommended that this system be changed so that the tax is applied at the wholesaler level.

Either way, consumers eventually pay the cost of the tax. But in two committee sessions Tuesday, MPs were told by revenue and finance officials that the government could benefit from a change in the current system.

Most of their presentation followed the reasoning laid out in a report published along with the June 23, 1975, federal budget by former Finance Minister Donald Macdonald. Since that time, more than 200 submissions commenting on the proposed changes have been received.

Part of the problem with levying commodity taxes at the manufacturers' level, as is now done, is that the manufacturers' price can vary on sales to different trade levels, or prices of some manufacturers may reflect costs like warranty and advertising that are not assumed by their competitors.

As a result, Revenue Canada uses "notional values" or artificial prices to determine what the commodity tax should be. Revenue officials acknowledge that this practice is ultra vires, or outside the law, so that if a manufacturer disagrees he has little recourse through legal appeals. He invariably must accept Revenue Canada's artificial price.

As well, importers are favored by the current tax system because expenses like advertising or warranties only occur after the tax point and are not included in the importers' value for tax. This puts the importer at an advantage over a domestic manufacturer.

Revenue officials told the finance committee that currently about 26 per cent of sales are taxed on artificial or notional values that Revenue Canada decides.

Changing the commodity tax system to apply the tax to wholesalers would mean that in about 90 per cent of cases, the tax would be applied on the actual sales price, revenue officials say.

The government would have to look only at the price charged to retailers, and the fact that some sellers are wholesalers, and some are producers acting as their own wholesalers, would not affect the value used for determining the tax.

Appeals would be more easily accommodated if the valuation base was uniform and the same criteria applied in 90 per cent of cases, revenue officials told the committee.

Robert Kaplan, committee chairman, said later that public hearings likely will be scheduled fon September. With luck, he added, the committee will report to Parliament as early as October 10, the date that Parliament is scheduled to resume after a summer recess expected to start this Friday.

Women Rank Low

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government said Tuesday fewer than three per cent of the top executives in the public service are women.

A treasury board report on equal opportunities for women in the public service said 1,286 of the senior executives in 1977 were men and 38 were women.

But the bulk of the clerical and secretarial jobs — 79 per cent — were held by women.

The treasury board said it has instructed all government departments to increase promotion opportunities for women.

Good Crop Seen

LONDON (AP) — The 1977-78 world wheat crop may be the second largest in history, totalling between 400 million and 410 million metric tons, the International Wheat Council says.

URUGUAYAN CONSULATE PETITIONED

MONTREAL (CP) — A petition protesting the detention of as many as 7,000 political dissidents in Uruguayan prisons was presented Tuesday to the Uruguayan consulate here on behalf of about 15 union and international development groups.

The petition was presented by Marcel Pepin, president of the World Confederation of Labor and former president of the Confederation of National Trade Unions, who called for a return to democracy in Uruguay and the restoration of trade union rights.

Loto Computer Decision Not Anti-Canadian: Horner

OTTAWA (CP) — Industry Minister Jack Horner said Tuesday he sees no contradiction between the government's $1.7 million Buy Canadian program and the fact the Loto Canada has awarded a $2.3 million contract for computer equipment to a United States company .

"I believe Loto Canada advertised widely and accepted an offer to do the job it wanted done," he told Conservative MP Paul Dick (Lanark—Renfrew — Carleton), adding that the government is not asking Canadians to do without products just because they are not domestically available.

Dick said Loto Canada did no advertising in seeking a computer firm to make terminals for its new lottery game.

A Canadian company, Consolidated Computers Ltd., informed the minister that it could do the job in conjunction with another Canadian company. Consolidated Computers, 53 per cent government owned, had said it could build the equipment with 80-per-cent Canadian content.

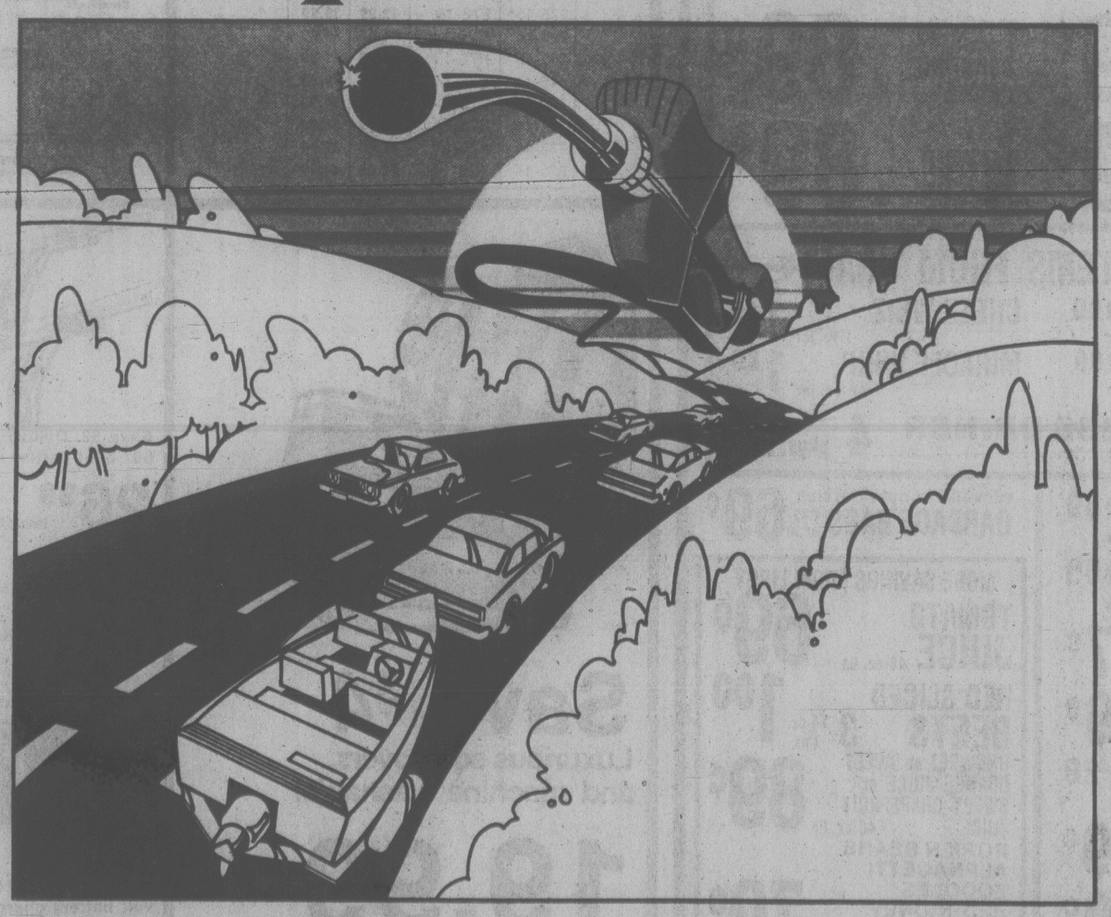

Horner ignored Dick's remarks about Consolidated Computers and told the House the Buy Canadian program was designed only to inform Canadians that when manufactured goods are available at home for the same price as imports, they should buy Canadian.

Dick then turned to Employment Minister Bud Cullen and urged him to pressure the cabinet into recommending a Buy Canadian policy for Loto Canada on the grounds this would create 500 jobs.

Cullen merely said he is satisfied Iona Campognolo, minister of fitness and amateur sport, has the situation under control.

ESSO EXTRA PREMIUM UNLEADED:
this is the weekend to find out how much better it performs.

If you fill up with Esso Extra Unleaded gasoline now, you'll enjoy its high octane performance all weekend. If you start out with your usual regular unleaded, you'll probably be ready for our premium unleaded coming home.

Think about it: with regular unleaded you're going to have to live with a loaded-down car, hills, passing in heavy traffic, hot weather and gasoline that just doesn't have the high-octane performance of Esso Extra premium unleaded.

That could mean knock, weak acceleration, run-on; frustration you just don't need.

Was there ever a more sensible time to test your first tankful of Canada's first and only premium unleaded?

What, No Shredder In Chretien's Office!

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government owns 850 paper shredders worth a total of more than $750,000.

The RCMP alone has 263 shredders scattered throughout its detachments across Canada.

The most expensive shredder — at $17,696 — is to be found in a Montreal post office, while the least expensive unit — at $90 — is owned by the revenue department.

These and other tidbits of paper-shredder trivia are contained in a bulky set of documents tabled recently in the Commons in response to questions asked last November by Conservative Elmer MacKay (Central Nova).

Why did MacKay want this information?

"I was just curious," he said Monday. "I just wanted to get a little information about the paper shredding capability some of the departments have."

He said he isn't sure what he will do with the information now that he has it.

An aide said MacKay's curiosity was prompted by a news report last fall that business is booming for the Ottawa companies which supply paper shredders to the federal government.

MacKay said he found some interesting inconsistencies in the information supplied by the government.

"For all its much-touted secrecy" the department of finance does not own a single paper shredder.

In its 119-page answer, the government has given detailed information about the location and cost of every paper shredder owned by every government department, agency and Crown corporation.

JOEY FEARS SEPARATISM

SARNIA, Ont. (CP) — Joey Smallwood, former Newfoundland premier, said Tuesday that the other provinces would question their role in Confederation if Quebec separated.

"It would be a race between the Atlantic provinces and British Columbia," he told a news conference. "It would also be a race between B.C. and Alberta."

Smallwood, on a cross-country tour to promote Canadian unity, said Canada is in serious danger and faces the greatest peril in its history.

Quebec Pilot Group Loses Another Language Round

MONTREAL (CP) — The Association des Gens de l'Air du Quebec has lost another round in a long-running court battle aimed at overturning federal regulations limiting the use of French in Quebec air traffic control.

In a judgment handed down here Tuesday, the Federal Court of Appeal rejected the Gens de l'Air challenge of a lower-court judgment which backed the federal government's stand.

The case centred on a ruling by Transport Minister Otto Lang in August, 1976, which restricted the use of French in air-to-ground communicatons to seven small airports handling light-plane traffic in Quebec.

The Gens de l'Air objected that the ruling violated the federal Official Languages Act and the Canadian Bill of Rights, but Federal Court Justice Louis Marceau rejected their case and upheld Lang's ruling last January.

Mr. Justice Marceau's decision was in turn confirmed by the appeal court Tuesday.

Pierre Menard, secretary of the Gens de l'Air, which represents French-speaking pilots and air traffic controllers in the province, said the group had not yet decided whether to appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada or to drop the case.

It was the second straight setback since the Gens de l'Air successfully challenged Air Canada regulations limiting the use of French on the job in 1976.

Mr. Justice Jules Deschenes of Quebec Superior Court ruled on that occasion that the Crown-owned ariline would have to lift its ban on the use of French in cockpits and would have to translate maintenance manuals into French.

However, that ruling was limited to conversations between pilots on flight decks and did not involve the use of French between pilots and ground controllers.

Porno Film Alert Ordered

OTTAWA (CP) — Revenue Minister Joe Guay said Tuesday that he doesn't believe an allegedly pornographic film called The Many Faces of Jesus really exists.

But, he added, if it does, it is banned from entering Canada borders.

"If by any chance, anybody should know that the film has been made, then I would appreciate it if I were told about it," said Guay.

He was replying in the Senate to senator Jack Marshall (PC—Newfoundland) who reopened the strange case of the film that nobody seems to have seen.

Senator Guay announced last month that he ordered customs officials to seize the alleged film if it shows at any port of entry.

He said he acted because of hundreds of protests from individual citizens and a handful of parliamenatarians. The protesters had heard the film portrayed Jesus Christ as a fornicator, a drunk and a homosexual.

Guay said then the film was to be seized under anti-obscenity powers which customs officers have. It was be viewed by his deputy minister, who would decide whether it was obscene.

Since then no customs or other government officials reported seeing evidence the film exists or is destined for Canada.

Marshall told Guay the "pornographic" film has been banned in many countries.

Guay said: "As I said before, I do not believe that the film has been made at all."

He said he understands someone intended to make the film and sought money to do so.

"I have given orders to all staff, as far as the ports of entry are concerned, not to allow this particular film, if there is such a film, to come into the country.

"If by any chance it should arrive at any port whatsover, the staff has been directed to get in touch immediately with the deputy minister who will deal with the matter at that time. So I want to reassure you that the matter has not been neglected."

Meat Rule Reversal Roasted

EDMONTON (CP) — The city's environmental health officer says Federal Health Minister Monique Begin is endangering the health of Canadians by reversing government policy on sanitary food handling.

Dr. Ken Pennifold said in an interview that Miss Begin's plan to allow ethnic barbecued-meat vendors to display their food in traditional ways will open the door to food poisoning.

Dr. Pennifold said display of meat in uncontrolled temperatures should continue to be banned.

"We're dealing with food safety . . . There's no room for silliness over ethnic or cultural backgrounds."

Michael Alexander, an information officer with the health protection branch in Ottawa, said public health standards and tradition can both be maintained.

A federal-provincial committee to re-examine temperature control guidelines was set up following Chinese community protests.

Ethiopia Pledges Fight to Finish

NAIROBI, Kenya (UPI) — Ethiopia has pledged to fight until the "last man" to defeat secessionist guerrillas in the strategic northern province of Eritrea, Addis Ababa Radio said today.

The radio, monitored in Nairobi, said a 10-day seminar on the Eritrea problem, involving 900 top Ethiopian officials, concluded Tuesday in Addis Ababa with a call to "heap shame" on the rebels.

As the seminar ended, the Eritrean Liberation Front said in a communique issued in Damascus, Syria, that Ethiopian forces had launched a new air and ground offensive in the Red Sea coastal province.

Addis Ababa Radio quoted Lt. Tamirat Ferede, spokesman for the nation's ruling military council, as telling the closing session of the Eritrea seminar that "the struggle must be fought to the last man, even if it was hard or bitter."

"The masses must be more prepared than ever to defend themsIves against attacks aimed at Ethiopia's revolution and her rights in the Red Sea," Tamirat said.

He was quoted as saying the slogan "blood, life and food for the war front" — adopted during the Ogaden war against Somalia — remained valid because the Ethiopian army was now engaged in combat in Eritrea.

The seminar was designed to brief influential Ethiopians, including ministers and ambassadors, about progress in the war in Eritrea, where the rebels have been fighting since 1961 to win independence from Ethiopia.

The Eritrean communique issued in Damascus said Ethiopian ground forces, backed by Soviet-supplied MiG fighter-bombers, had launched an assault against the rebel-held town of Om Hager, 500 miles northwest of Addis Ababa and only a few miles from the Sudanese border.

Ethiopian jets "are indiscriminately strafing civilian areas as well," it said.

The Ethiopian attack on Om Hager suggests an attempt to sever Eritrean links with Sudan. Rebels move freely across the border to bring in supplies and carry out wounded.

The communique said heavy fighting was also raging at the town of Adowa, where the Ethiopians have massed troops and equipment, in Tigre province just south of the Eritrean border.

The area is considered a staging base for a thrust into Eritrea, and the reports of fighting there suggested it had been attacked by the insurgents.

Student Rioting Persists

MATAMOROS, Mexico (AP) — Violence erupted again early today in this riot-torn border town as students stormed through the red-light district on the outskirts of the city, burning one night spot and causing heavy damage to two others.

A few kilometres away, soldiers armed with machine-guns patrolled the site of a four-hour riot Monday night that caused an estimated $2 million damage and left three persons dead and 30 injured.

Police said one person was injured in today's outburst. They said a group of youths stormed the Golden Palace nightclub, ousted customers and set fire to the building. They also hurled rocks, bottles and other items through the windows of at least two other night spots, police said.

Two teen-agers were shot and killed Monday night as students mobbed the town plaza protesting the alleged beating death last week of a 15-year-old student who had been in police custody.

Three policemen have been jailed in connection with the incident, but the students dragged Mayor Antonio Cavazos Garza into the plaza and demanded that Police Chief Emiliano Del Toro also be fired.

When police tried to break up the rally, witnesses reported, the crowd erupted, and an estimated 6,000 to 7,000 people went on a rampage that left a trail of destroyed banks, businesses and government buildings.

Del Toro submitted his resignation Tuesday but city officals refused to accept it. Instead, they suspended Del Toro pending the outcome of an investigation into the student's death.

A third death was reported from Monday night's violence when officials discovered a charred body in a judge's office in the city jail building.

Matamoros is a city of about 300,000 people across the Rio Grande from Brownsville, Tex.

Scientists Sought

TOKYO (AP) — The Chinese government is conducting a nationwide survey to locate all scientific and technical personnel, the official Hsinhua news agency says.

NOISE RULE LEAVES OUT CONCORDES

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. transportation department has imposed a night-time curfew on supersonic aircraft effective July 31, and ruled that all such aircraft built after 1979 must meet noise standards set for subsonic jets if they operate in the United States.

The new noise rule exempts the 16 special-specification Anglo-French Concordes now flying or being built.

Auction Topples Records

LONDON (WP) — The eight-day auction of the Robert Von Hirsch art collection ended Tuesday night with a record $34.1 million in sales.

The total is more than three times that reached at any previous art auction. When the last item was sold at Sotheby's Mayfair sales room, the crowd of dealers broke out into discreet applause.

The final night's sale of impressionist and post-impressionist drawings lacked the electric tension of earlier sessions where some objects fetched $1 million and more.

Even so, the hardened dealers who dominate the audiences at such gatherings broke out into murmurs of conversation at the high prices bid. A watercolor by Paul Cezanne, Still Life with Green Melon, was purchased by an anonymous New Yorker for $550,000.

His bid, over the transatlantic telephone, was the largest sum ever paid for a drawing by a modern painter.

Until now, the most ever paid for a modern drawing was $460,000 for another Cezanne watercolor.

Sotheby's tireless press agents, as inventive as sportswriters in discovering specialized records, also claimed new highs for drawings by Vincent Van Goch, Paul Gaugin, Georges Seurat and Berthe Morisot.

A Van Gogh sketch in brown ink and pencil of tiled roof tops at Saintes-Maries sold for $380,000.

Perhaps the most remarkable price was the $260,000 bid — again in New York — for a small Cezanne watercolor of one of his famous studies of bathers. Only 5 by 8½ inches, it is a page torn from his sketchbook, a model for a work in progress.

Another Strange Tale Spun In the Land Of the Midnight Sun

FAIRBANKS, Alaska (AP) — The story unfolding in the murder trial harks back to the brawling days of the Klondike gold rush. A dispute over a mining claim led to angry words, threats, and finally, a fatal burst of gunfire.

Two miners died in a hail of bullets last Dec. 22 in Alaska's Fortymile River mining district. Charged with first-degree murder are Charles Brunn, 20, and Earl Russell, 18. They are on trial in state Superior Court for the shooting deaths of mining partners Joseph Hajec, 49, and Thomas Bowers, 42.

Hajec and Bowers died of gunshot wounds from the incident three days before Christmas, as ice and snow gripped the mining site 256 kilometres east of Fairbanks.

The two mining teams, searching for gold in bedrock, were digging in adjacent holes in ice at the mouth of Napoleon Creek on the Fortymile. Arguments were frequent about ownership of the single claim on which the two projects were located, testimony said.

Robert Stuart of the Alaska State Troopers, testifying when the trial opened last week, said he visited the site in November hoping to be a peacemaker. At his urging, the two teams agreed to work on either side of a line that he drew dividing the site. He said the four men also agreed not to take guns to the claim.

In a recorded interview after his arrest, Russell told Trooper Rollie Port that Hajec had told him and his partner on the day of the shooting that if they came to the claim again, Hajec would kill them.

"Joe (Hajec) said he was going to mine it all and if we came down on the ice again he would shoot us," Russell said in the interview, adding that he saw a gun in the truck Bowers and Hajec used to get to their work site.

Russell said he and Brunn returned to their cabin on a bank overlooking the site after the threat, but that Brunn went back to the claim that afternoon carrying a pistol.

"Charles (Brunn) said if they make a move for their gun we will have to kill them," Russell said in the interview played in court.

Brunn testified that when he approached Hajec and Bowers, Bowers moved toward the truck. Brunn said he thought Bowers was going for his gun, and that he opened fire on the two men, then unarmed.

Russell's lawyer, Ralph Beistline, said that when Russell heard the shooting he grabbed a rifle and ran down to the river from the cabin, assuming his partner was in trouble.

Korean Gunboats Trade Fire

SEOUL (AP) — South Korean and North Korean gunboats traded shots after a North Korean boat collided with pursuing South Korean patrol vessels and sank, the South Korean defense ministry announced today.

The ministry said two North Korean patrol boats violated South Korean territorial waters Tuesday night but were repelled after an exchange of fire. It said there were no South Korean casualties.

North Korea, however, accused the South Koreans of deliberately sinking a "peaceful fishing boat" and kidnapping fishermen aboard the vessel.

The South Korean announcement said the battle occurred about an hour after the North Korean boat sank.

The incident occurred about six kilometres west of the island controlled by the UN command and just south of seaward extension of the Korean military demarcation line.

It was the third naval incident in two months between the two countries. South Korea sank one boat April 28 and another May 19.

LOCUST SWARMS REPORTED

NEW DELHI (AP) — Reports received in New Delhi say swarms of crop-destroying locusts have been spotted in the northern and western Indian states of Gujarat, Haryna, Punjab, Rajasthan, and Uttar Pradesh.

In Haryana, local authorities invoked a 1949 law to mobilize able-bodied men above the age of 14 to fight the threat. Planes sprayed insecticide over a square mile area when one cloud of millions of locusts had settled, authorities said.

Easy holiday patio party can be half made in advance

Holiday Meat Cakes

Mary Moore

To make Dominion Day a proper holiday for you I have selected my favorite meat cakes recipe and my all-purpose barbecue sauce for you to serve on buns on your patio or in the garden or on the balcony.

It is a good idea for you to make in advance the large quantity barbecue sauce below for it freezes to perfection for future barbecue parties.

ALL-PURPOSE BARBECUE SAUCE
(20 cups; freezable)

- 9 tbsp. oil
- 6 small cooking onions, chopped fine
- 3 green peppers, chopped fine
- ¾ cup finely chopped celery
- ⅜ teaspoon garlic salt
- 1¼ teaspoons salt
- ¾ teaspoon pepper
- 1 teaspoon oregano
- 6 tbsp. chopped parsley
- 4 small bay leaves, crushed
- 1 48-oz. can tomato juice
- 2 14-oz. cans tomato sauce
- 1 19-oz. can tomatoes
- 1 13-oz. can tomato paste
- 4 cups water
- 2 10-oz. bottles chili sauce
- 6 tbsp. sugar
- ½ teaspoon cayenne pepper
- 1 to 3 whole chili peppers (see note below)

In a very large soup pot or preserving kettle saute onion, green pepper, celery and garlic salt in oil until vegetables are limp but not browned. Add all remaining ingredients — adding only 1 chili pepper if you want it hot; 2 chili peppers for hotter; 3 chili peppers for hottest. Bring to boil, reduce heat and simmer, uncovered, 2½ to 3 hours, stirring frequently. Fish out chili peppers. (Note: Tie whole chili peppers on a long string and attach it to the pot handle for easy removal.)

HOMEMADE MEAT CAKES
(12; for hamburgers)

- 2 lbs. ground chuck or round steak
- 2 teaspoons salt
- 2 teaspoons Worcestershire sauce
- ¼ cup finely chopped onion
- 1 cup undiluted evaporated milk
- ¼ teaspoon pepper
- 1 clove garlic finely chopped
- 2 tbsp. butter or margarine

Lightly mix beef, seasonings, onion and milk and shape into 10 or 12 patties. (The mixture will be quite moist to handle.) Use lifter to transfer to greased grill (or frying pan). Add patties and brown on each side, but do not overcook.

Serve on split buns and top with barbecue sauce. Buns may be toasted and buttered if desired.

Serve with iced tea.

Spaghetti: Great for Athletes

tiny bennett

The Times has on hand a few Tiny Bennett columns which were writeen before his sudden death two weeks ago. These will be published in the next few weeks.

It is quite the thing in advertising to suggest that no homemaker cook can possibly spare the time to make a sauce from scratch, and then comes the pitch for a canned product.

Canned spaghetti sauce can be quite good, although I don't feel the same way about some of the packets that start off with a dry mix. But the thing is there is really no fussing to making the real. And best of all it is fun and one gets a far superior flavor.

Yet visiting a friend who was preparing sauce from a packet mix, she rather surprised me by saying that only a genius could come up with the real thing. "Look at that list of ingredients," she said. "It's a mile long."

It was for spaghetti sauce Bolognese, a superb sauce that is fun to make, but I had to agree with her, it does have a long list of ingredients, so I showed her how I make my simple spaghetti meat sauce.

The spaghetti, sauce and grated cheese is also recommended for persons about to perform arduous physical exertion, as opposed to the old idea of steak and eggs before a contest of some sort.

Some time ago I went on one of the Miles for Millions walks, and at 5:30 a.m. was in my breakfast nook wolfing down a large, juicy steak I had broiled for the occasion. Yet as I crossed the 25-mile finishing line I was shivering, and it wasn't a cold day.

The following year, on the advice of a medical expert, instead of the steak, I ate a huge platter of spaghetti, with my own meat sauce and grated cheese, and finished the walk in fine fettle.

Apparently steak and eggs, being protein burn off swiftly, while the spaghetti meal burns slowly and provides energy/warmth value over the long haul. So pasta is not simply the fattening food of popular imagination, but can form a dish we can all enjoy, including our own young athletes.

Cooking Spaghetti

All pastas cook better in as large an amount of salted water as possible. I use my biggest pot, almost fill it with water, dash in salt according to packet instructions, and when at a rolling boil add the spaghetti.

Never break the spaghetti to get it into the pot, but lean it on the side, and as the heat attacks the submerged ends, it will fold over and slide down into the water. And now lift it and turn it gently with a long-handled fork, so it doesn't stick together.

Follow the cooking instructions printed on the packet, because the folks who make the spaghetti know more about this than me. I taste for done by lifting out a strand and biting — it should be soft but just a little crisp. Drain into a big strainer, rinse under the hot tap and keep hot over a pot with an inch of water for steaming. And this is the first time the spaghetti is covered.

Simple Spaghetti Meat Sauce

Into a heavy saucepan pour two tbsps. cooking oil (olive is best, but use what you've got). On medium heat when the oil hazes, add one large Spanish onion in thin slices and stir. When soft and yellow, but not brown, add one pound good ground beef, two stalks celery finely diced, and stir to break up any lumps.

When the meat is an even grey color, tip the pot, scrape the contents to the high side, and using a spoon, dip out all liquid fat and oil, and discard. Do this three times, until it shows juice rather than fat. And now add one can of whole, peeled tomatoes, one small can of tomato paste, salt and black pepper, a generous pinch of ground hot red pepper (dried), one tsp. oregano, one tsp. parsley and two or three dashes of chili powder — optional if you don't like that little bite in your foods.

When well mixed, the sauce is set to simmer uncovered for one hour. And it should be gently stirred from time to time.

Serve the spaghetti piping hot and let people put on sauce from a serving container, pass grated Italian cheese to dust on top of the sauce, and pass also hot crusty Italian bread and a red Chianti wine.

Leftover spaghetti sauce is cooled, spooned into a freezer jar or carton, and deep-frozen for the next meal or snack. It freezes well. Soon I'll pass on another spaghetti sauce, made with clams.

Beets a Good Source of Energy

hilda beastall

Young beets will be abundant in home gardens during the next few weeks with the resulting quest for interesting ways to use them.

Beets have a pleasant, distinct flavor unlike any other vegetable and though not particularly high in vitamins or minerals it is a valuable summer vegetable for its energy value.

Small whole beets, cooked, and with skins slipped off when cool enough to handle, are well liked in summer salads.

YOUNG BEET AND ONION SALAD

Green looseleaf lettuce
12 small cooked beets, skinned
½ cup homemade yogurt
1 Tbsp. fresh lemon juice
12 young green onions

Arrange lettuce leaves on four plates. Place three whole beets in centre, with finely sliced green onion around. Stir lemon juice into yogurt and spoon over the beets, allowing the tips to show.

A most attractive and good tasting salad, and satisfying with wholewheat bread cheese sandwiches.

Most of us interested in the simpler ways to serve good vegetables have heard of, or enjoyed, a dish called Harvard Beets. No doubt it originated in the eastern United States judging by its name, but why the dish honored the famous university is not known to me.

There is more than one version of Harvard Beets. Here is one using lemon juice, very quick to make if the beets have been cooked either the day before or in the morning. Young beets have most flavor, though the method of serving certainly enhances older beets.

HARVARD BEETS

2 Tbsp. sugar
2 tsp. cornstarch
3 Tbsp. lemon juice
2 Tbsp. sunflower oil
¼ cup water
2 cups small beets, cooked and diced

Mix sugar, cornstarch, lemon juice and water in small pan. Boil gently for 5 minutes; stir to keep smooth. revove from heat. Add oil, mix well.

Add the diced beets and reheat if to be served hot.

If for serving cold, add beets, mix carefully and set aside to blend and cool for serving with green and yellow summer salads.

When green zucchini and yellow crookneck squash become abundant, Harvard Beets makes a lovely third vegetable on a colorful platter. The beets can be grated while raw for this salad, and the squash when young are far more delicious raw than cooked.

BEETS IN ORANGE SAUCE

½ cup orange juice
2 tsp. lemon juice
1 Tbsp. sugar
2 tsp. cornstarch
2 Tbsp. oil or vegetable margarine
2 cups cooked and diced beet

Mix orange and lemon juice with sugar and cornstarch in small saucepan. Cook for 10 minutes, stirring to keep smooth as it thickens. Remove from heat; add oil or margarine. Stir well. Add beets and reheat without boiling if wanted as hot vegetable.

As cold salad vegetable, add the beets to the hot sauce and set aside until cold.

These methods of serving beets without vinegar but with the pleasant sharpness of lemon or orange makes it possible for small children to enjoy this colorful and delicious vegetable.

The beets in either the lemon or the orange sauce will keep a couple of days in a covered glass jar in refrigerator. I have used it as a topping on open faced sandwiches of cheese and hard boiled egg for a colorful lunch plate. Topped with homemade yogurt, sprinkled with chopped parsley it is a delicious and satisfying midday meal for active youngsters or adults.

Later in the season as beets grow larger in garden or allotment, bake them in the oven at the same time as potatoes. Both may be baked in foil wrappings for one hour with moderate heat at 177 deg. C.

Still later, by early fall a hot supper dish known by the intriguing name of Red Flannel Hash is worth trying. I had heard the name years ago but only recently came across a recipe.

Here again, it would be interesting to know the origin of the name. It seems to imply chilly days when eastern farmers were likely to don their "Red Flannels" for outdoor chores. And the hash indicates that the vegetables can be "leftovers" planned for the purpose the day before.

RED FLANNEL HASH

The dish is mostly cooked beets cut into small dice, half a medium potato (boiled) for each serving, a tablespoon of chopped onion and a tablespoon of bacon bits, fried crisp, to each serving.

After cooking the bacon, remove it from the pan and toss in the vegetables. Cover with lid and heat thoroughly but don't actually fry the mixture. I would add a half cupful of chopped cabbage, comfrey tips and Swiss chard mixed, to each serving. It will cook sufficiently in the steam with the pan lid on.

Return bacon bits to pan; toss all together and serve with homemade wholewheat buns.

Somewhere in my reading recently I came across the statement that "soon good cooking will exist only in cook books because it is no longer fashionable to spend time on the simple good things of life."

I see no sign of it happening here; as long as we can grow fresh vegetables and fruits in the home garden or a rented allotment, or buy them reasonably fresh at local stores, let us continue to take the time to present them to our families, or for our own meals as loners, as delicious and sustaining food.

THAT'S FISHY

HAYWARD, Wis. (AP) — The National Fresh Water Fishing Hall of Fame will have a new building in the shape of a muskie rising from a pool of water. The glass-fibre, steel and concrete structure will be 140 feet long and four storeys high and its open mouth will serve as an observation platform looking into a display room.

your health

By L. L. COLEMAN, M.D.

No Link With Health

My daughter is a strong, athletic girl. I don't remember her having any major illness. However, shortly after she was married she had a tubal pregnancy. Isn't it strange that it should happen to somebody in such perfect health? — Mrs. J.B.

Dear Mrs. B.:

There really isn't any connection between a history of good health and athletic prowess with an ectopic, or tubal, pregnancy.

An ectopic pregnancy occurs when the fertilized egg does not complete the passage down from the Fallopian tube into the uterus. The fertilized egg remains in the tube, continues to develop there, and before long produces abdominal pain and other symptoms. Then surgery becomes imperative.

This interference with the normal progress of the fertilized egg may be caused by adhesions in and around the Fallopian tube, by a birth defect, or by a stricture of the tube.

I am certain that your greatest concern is that a subsequent pregnancy might also develop in the other Fallopian tube. The chances are very slight that such a condition would be duplicated.

For the two years that I've been married I have been distressed by a trichomona infection of the vagina. Even with treatment, this keeps coming back. Is there any way to be permanently cured? — Mrs. B.L.

Dear Mrs. L.:

There are now some excellent drugs that can control this troublesome condition. Metronidazole, when taken by mouth for about 10 days, has been very effective in controlling the problem.

Perhaps the reason that your symptoms persist may lie in the fact that your husband has not been treated at the same time. Many men carry the organism responsible for trichomonas vaginitis. Consequently, intensive treatment must be directed at your husband, too. Only in this way can recurrences of the infection be decreased, and even eradicated.

Along with this drug there are special vaginal suppositories and irrigations which, when diligently used, may correct the problem.

I have breast-fed both of my children. I'm giving serious thought to having my breasts made smaller. Does this mean that I will not be able to breast-feed another child? — Mrs. M.K.

Dear Mrs. K.:

The aim of all plastic surgery of the breast is to retain its normal physiological functioning. In most instances, breast-feeding should not be affected. Yet, if very extensive surgery is performed there may be some such adverse effects. It is imperative that you do not undertake breast surgery without first being completely satisfied about any such possibilities.

Apricot Delight

2 packages (3 ounces each) peach flavored gelatin
2 cups boiling water
2 cups (17-ounce can) drained apricot halves
8 whole Maraschino cherries
Apricot syrup plus water to make 1¼ cups liquid
½ cup Carnation Instant Nonfat Dry Milk crystals plus water to make ⅔ cup liquid Carnation
½ teaspoon almond extract
2 tablespoons honey
2 tablespoons cognac

Dissolve gelatin in boiling water. Chop apricots and cherries. Combine 1¼ cups gelatin mixture, apricot liquid, and apricots and cherries. Chill to consistency of unbeaten egg whites. Spoon about ½ cup apricot gelatin into eight dessert glasses.

Cool remaining gelatin in refrigerator. Combine liquid instant milk, almond extract, honey and cognac. Add to cooled clear gelatin. Chill until almost firm. Whip milk-gelatin mixture at high speed until foamy (about 4 minutes). Pour foamy mixture over apricot gelatin. Chill 2 hours. Makes eight servings.

Special Exercises May Be the Answer

By RUTH FREMES and ZAK SABRY

DEAR RUTH AND ZAK:

I am so discouraged in my efforts to lose weight because I have done all the right things. I eat medium size meals just chock full of nutrition and avoid fats almost exclusively, but lots of protein and some starch, and fresh fruits and raw vegetables, even putting fibre and extra nourishment in my morning two-thirds cup of oatmeal porridge in the way of raw bran and wheat germ.

I think I know the reason, but it does not make it any easier. Two and a half years ago, I had a very severe car accident and now I am quite lame. The only sport I can do is swimming. I do swim once a week and sometimes oftener. But before, I used to play badminton all winter, tennis all summer, and bicycle everywhere in bicycling season.

It hurts me to walk, almost all the time, so of course I walk as little as possible, and drive as much as possible. I just don't burn that many calories in a day. I sit whenever I can, because standing hurts too. Any time I put weight on my right foot, it hurts a little. My orthopedic surgeon has done everything he can for me, so I guess I'm stuck for the rest of my life this way.

I realize I'm so much better than so many people in the world who are bedridden or confined to a wheelchair. But for someone with a weight problem, it seems so cruel. I was able to keep my weight withing fairly reasonable bounds before, and didn't try very hard to lose. Now I know I should lose quite a lot, but I'm just not losing on 1,000 to 1,500 calories a day. I know myself well enough to know that if I cut down more than that, I'll only get so hungry and miserable that I'll go off the deep end — and stay off.

S.P., LONDON, ONT.

DEAR S.P.:

Undoubtedly, you are in a dilemma. It is obvious also that you appreciate the value of losing weight slowly and without unbalancing your diet. Before you accident, you were active and enjoyed a good diet and healthy exercise. Now, you're deprived of the capacity to play your favorite sports and of being your own active self.

No doubt it will take time to get over your accident. But we wonder if a physiotherapist could help devise certain exercises that would help strengthen some of the muscles weakened by the injury. Your orthopedic surgeon probably has done everything he can, as you say. Now, it is time for rehabilitation. A referral from your physician to the department of physiotherapy in your local hospital, or the University Hospital (as you live in a university city) would probably be of help.

You don't tell us how much you weigh and how overweight do you consider yourself to be. It is possible that your goals for losing weight are unrealistic. Our society tends to put unrealistic demands on women to be underweight and excessively slim, which is not healthy. We tend to accept men as "hunks" and expect women to be "Twiggys". Even Twiggy has gained a bit of weight and looks much better for it.

We hope that with the right help from a physiotherapist, your common sense in eating, realistic goals of your ideal weight, and lots and lots of determination, that you will get back to being your old active self.

DEAR RUTH AND ZAK:

Trying to avoid coffee and decafienated coffee for gastric and financial reasons, I've bought a product that is described on the label as "instant coffee substitute — a cereal beverage." The ingredients are: roasted malt barley (42%), roasted barley (30%) and roasted chicory (28%).

Is there a substantial number of calories in this form of cereal?

H.Mc., NORTH VANCOUVER

DEAR H.Mc.:

We would estimate that your coffee substitute contains about 20 calories in every teaspoonful, which is notvery much. If coffee bothers you and you find a substitute refreshing, this many calories, mainly from starch, is not excessive. If you add a teaspoon of sugar, count 20 more calories; milk goes for 10 calories per tablespoonful.

We should mention that or spoons are levelled and never heaping.

DEAR RUTH AND ZAK:

I was very interested in your column which referred to the risk of losing weight while nursing a baby. I am expecting my first child at the end of next month and I plan on nursing it for at least a year and do not plan on using supplements, unless necessary, until my baby is six months old.

I was 20 pounds overweight when I became pregnant and I have gained 18 pounds to date. I was planning on getting to work after my baby is born, with extra exercise and a diet approved by my doctor so that I can lose those excess 20 pounds and get "in shape" for summer.

Can I safely attempt to lose any weight while I am nursing? I am referring to the DDT and PCBs stored in the body fat and which are released into the breast milk on losing weight. Would a moderate weight loss of one-half to one pound a week be safe? Would it make any difference if I lose weight by exercise or reduced calories? Is there any way that I can have my milk tested during this period on a regular basis to check the levels of dangerous chemicals?

A.K., KITCHENER, ONT.

DEAR A.K.:

It is essential that you proceed with breast-feeding your baby as you are planning. You should also get in touch, either directly or through your doctor, with your local health unit to arrange for a sample of your milk to be taken and tested for PCBs. The staff at the health unit will advise you as to the specific precautions that you have to follow so that your milk sample will be suitable for analysis. The government of Ontario recently announced a program to screen mothers' milk at no charge. The results of the analysis will be forwarded from the government laboratories to your health unit's medical officer of health, who will then convey them and discuss their interpretation with your physician.

Other provinces may or may not have similar programs for analysis. If there is no government or private laboratory in your province capable of performing this analysis, the Ontario Research Foundation, Sheridan Park, Mississauga, Ont. can do this analysis for a fee.

The interpretation of the results of such an analysis in terms of risk to the breastfed baby is not all that easy. But, you should have some idea as to whether you should then continue or discontinue your breast-feeding. A recent report of an advisory committee to The Honorable Monique Begin, Minister of health and Welfare Canada, recommended that where levels of PCBs in mother's milk exceed 50 micrograms per kilogram, physicians should pay particular attention to the mother's history, the child's birth weight, general conditions and subsequent growth and development. It was specified that "it was the Committee's opinion that in view of the benefits of breast-feeding in most instances, it would be advisable to continue nursing."

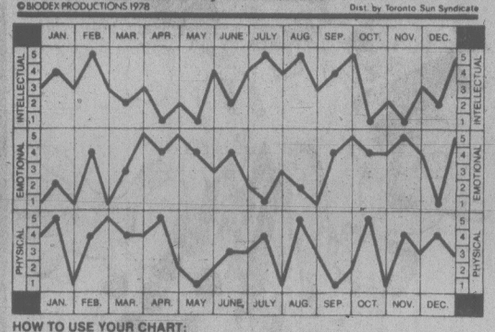

It will depend on the levels of PCBs from the laboratory analysis and on your doctor's assessment of yours and your baby's health conditions, as to whether you should continue nursing and whether or not you should attempt to lose weight while nursng, and at what rate you may attempt to lose the excess weight. It really will make no difference whether you lose weight by restricting your calories or by exercising. Your doctor and the medical officer of health will be able to advise you also on whether it will be necessary to have repeat sampling of your milk for analysis.

HOW TO USE YOUR CHART:

Locate your month of birth. The dots on each graph highlight your biorhythm readouts. Check the scales on the left or right for your Intellectual, Emotional and Physical factors, from 1 to 5. Add these three numbers to obtain your Bio-dex. The Bio-dex is computed on average population age based on official Government statistics.

BIO-DEX READOUT:

0-5 Negative Cycle- If somebody smiles at you when you're feeling nasty, try not to be cynical.

6-10 Neutral Cycle- Your self-image needs work. Add up all your positive features.

11-15 Positive Cycle- There is a message to pass along. Don't put it off — you'll find the right words.

We give things away as we go through life. Sometimes this is impulsive, other times we plan, save, and when the right time comes, we give. On an emotional low, regrets can surface and gnaw at you. You may be fighting a general feeling of loss. Remember the pleasure your gift produced, and the goodwill it generated. It really is the thought that counts, and your loss is trivial compared with the happiness you've created.

PEANUT DOUBLE TREATS

½ cup butter or margarine, softened
1½ cups firmly-packed brown sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 egg
½ cup chunk-style peanut butter
1 cup pancake mix
1 cup quick rolled oats, uncooked
Chopped peanuts

Beat butter until creamy. Add sugar, vanilla, egg and peanut butter, mixing well. Stir in pancake mix and oats.

Shape to form 1-inch balls; roll in chopped peanuts. Bake on ungreased cookie sheets in preheated moderate oven (350°F.) 10 to 12 minutes.

60-MINUTE GOURMET

Some Fine Herbs And Their Uses

By PIERRE FRANEY

In writing this column I have often reflected on the differences, as I see and remember them, between home kitchens, those of my childhood and those in this country.

I was brought up in a rural community in Burgundy, and we literally lived off the land. Our home garden was not vast, but it was copiously planted and carefully tended. There was one small quarter given over to sweet green herbs and that was my grandmother's pride. She grew an abundance of parsley and chives, tarragon and chervil. Those were the basics, not only of her herb plot but also of her kitchen.

It was years later, as an apprentice in a Paris restaurant, that I learned that these were the most traditional herbs of the classic French kitchen. These four herbs are what are known as "les fines herbes," and they are the requirements for a few thousand dishes, the best known of which is in an omelette aux fines herbes.

CALVES' LIVER SAUTEED WITH HERBS

8 Thin slices calves' liver, about 1½ pounds
Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
1 Cup flour
2 Tablespoons peanut, vegetable or corn oil
6 Tablespoons butter
2 Tablespoons finely chopped shallots
1 Tablespoon red wine vinegar
2 Tablespoons finely chopped parsley
2 Tablespoons finely chopped chives
1 Teaspoon finely chopped fresh tarragon

1. Place the liver slices on a flat surface and sprinkle on both sides with salt and pepper. Dredge on both sides in flour and shake off excess.

2. Heat the oil in a large skillet and cook as many pieces of liver at one time as will fit comfortably in the skillet. Cook about one minute or longer until nicely browned. The cooking time will vary depending on the thickness of the slices. Turn and cook about one minute or longer to the desired degree of doneness.

3. Remove the slices to a warm platter and continue adding slices in one layer. As the slices cook, remove them and add more. Continue until all slices are cooked. Transfer the liver to the platter and keep warm.

4. Pour off any fat that is left in the pan. Wipe out the pan with a clean cloth or paper toweling. Add the butter and cook over high heat until the butter is hazelnut brown. Add the shallots, stirring, and cook about five seconds. Add the vinegar and pour the hot butter over the liver. Sprinkle with parsley, chives and tarragon.

Yield: 4 servings.

New York Times

dear abby

DEAR ABBY: My husband is a big, handsome, vigorous-looking man of 29. He's a loving father, but due to a chronic back problem he can't lift anything that weighs more than four or five pounds, much less his 13-month-old son.

While taking a Sunday walk, I was carrying our husky child, when a total stranger asked, "Why isn't that strong young man carrying that baby instead of you?"

I can't tell you how humiliating this was to a man who has already suffered much pain and has had to limit his activities because of his unseen handicap.

Please, please print this so ignorant busybodies (even well-meaning ones) will realize that things ar not always as they appear. — HAPPY TO CARRY THE LOAD.

DEAR HAPPY: And I'm happy to carry your worthwhile message to my readers.

DEAR ABBY: Please say something about people who punish their children and then won't let them cry.

I have a relative who increases the punishment if a child cries.

TENDERHEARTED AUNT.

DEAR AUNT: To punish a child for cryng is cruel. Children (and adults, too) need to express their emotions freely without fear of being shamed, ridiculed or punished further.

Please tell your relative that tears are as vital to the emotional growth of a child as laughter, and crying is a normal response — not a sign of weakness. Your relative is guilty of child abuse.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "CAN'T FORGIVE": He who cannot forgive others destroys the bridge over which he must pass himself; for every man needs to be forgiven.

Hand Wash Causing Deformities?

NEW YORK (AP) — A high incidence of birth defects has been found among the children of nurses in six hospitals in Sweden who scrubbed regularly with cleansing agents containing hexachlorophene.

Hexachlorophene is widely used as an antiseptic in hospitals in the United States. Hospital personnel wash their hands with the substance repeatedly during the day.

The use of hexachlorophene is considered to have reduced the number of staphylococcal infections at many hospitals throughout the world.

But a possible link to birth defects among hospital workers' offspring was reported Tuesday by Dr. Hildegard Halling, a chief physician at Sudertalje Hospital in Sweden.

Hexachlorophene was banned from non-prescription products in the United States in 1972 after it was found to be harmful in washing newborns. The product pHisoHex is still sold by prescription but is not recommended for the routine washing of infants.

Dr. Halling said the study of 460 live births to the women hospital workers showed 25 severe malformations where one in 1,000 might be expected. In a control group of 233 births, there were no severe malformations.

In addition to the 25 severe malformations, there were three cases of Mongolism and 46 minor deformities. There were eight minor deformities among the control group.

The major birth defects included heart malfunctions, defects of the esophagus, a missing hand, and a range of other defects.

"The reason for doing the present study," Dr. Halling said, "was the clinical impression that employees in the chronic unit of a hospital where hexachlorophene was introduced for hand-washing, seemed to have an increased incidence of babies with congenital malformation."

At one of the hospitals, the nurses washed their hands from 14 to 67 times a day from 1969 to 1975.

Womb Memories May Haunt Adult

OTTAWA (CP) — An unborn child is a living, feeling human being who stores and learns from what happens before and during birth, says a Toronto psychiatrist.

Dr. Thomas Verny Tuesday told a Senate subcommittee on childhood experiences as a cause of criminal behavior that too many mothers think of their children as a "blob of protoplasm" or a fetus in a jar full of formaldehyde.

"When the mother thinks of her child as a cyst, an abcess or a growth somewhere down there, this has an effect on the child."

Verny said there have been thousands of cases of women unable to have children even though they are in perfect physical health suddenly becoming pregnant when they adopt a child.

"Sometimes even applying for an adoption will bring on a pregnancy," he said. "There's something either welcoming or negative in the uterus."

He said it is possible to distinguish two different states of consciousness in an eight-month-old fetus using a machine that measures brain-waves.

"The fetus actually sleeps," he said. "And if he sleeps, he may be dreaming — and if he's dreaming, there must be content to his dreams. He must have thoughts and feelings."

The psychiatrist said he felt very strongly that only women who want children should have them because the unborn child can feel intuitively if he is wanted. He said this could lead to trauma or anxiety later in life.

"I've had patients who remember knitting needles coming into the vagina to try and bring about an abortion. Now I'm not saying they knew they were knitting needles, but they felt the threat the needles posed."

He said patients remember birth experience itself in great detail. They remember what position they were in when they were born, what the room looked like and what the people around them said.

"Patients have recalled the doctor saying, 'I'm sorry Mrs. Smith, it's a girl,'" Verny said. "Now what kind of an attitude does that give the child?"

The birth experience may be the worst beating a child receives in his life, he said, and it should be made as pleasant for the child as possible.

"For the first eight months the child lives in a blissful environment," he said. "Then suddenly he is pushed out into a world of bright lights, lifted up by his ankles and given a hearty slap.

"Atmospheric pressure rushes into his lungs and there is also a rotation of the heart, which causes even more pain.

"Then, after stinging drops are placed in his eyes, he is wrapped, probably too tightly, in clothes that feel like sandpaper and placed in what is euphemistically called a nursery with 30 other screaming, unhappy babies."

Verny said he prefers the method where the baby is placed — umbilical cord still attached — on the mother's breast before being taken away. He also said the father should be present for the birth.

Indian Health Faulty

HALIFAX (CP) — Native children in Canada are not receiving adequate health care because of jurisdictional disputes between the federal and provincial government over responsibility for providing services, Dr. John Tibbles, president of the Canadian Pediatric Society, said Tuesday.

"We are deeply concerned that the native child is caught up in a web of jurisdictional disputes — who should provide the care," he said in an interview.

In the past, the federal government has provided health care but because it is a provincial responsiblity some provinces, including Quebec and Ontario are becoming involved.

"Apparently, there are instances of health care being reduced."

Tibbles said the society wants to see increased public health services to native people, improved training of personnel and involvement of local health personnel in a paramedical capacity.

Dr. Don Delahaye of Kingston, Ont., who spent the last year at Moose Factory, Ont., hospital on James Bay, said a problem exists in that area because Quebec has been providing health care since 1969 for Indian and Inuit people on the Quebec side of James Bay and Hudson Bay.

"In my opinion it is not providing that care that well."

However, in the last year there has been increased co-operation between the Quebec and federal governments.

Women's Lib Stirring In Russia

MOSCOW (AP) — Russian researchers say a women's revolt is under way in the Russian family as overworked wives begin to stand up for their rights.

Sociologists say Russian women work longer hours than men, earn less money, and are getting fed up with their traditional role as the docile half of the household.

There is no organized women's liberation movement in the Soviet Union. Officially, women and men are already equal under the U.S.S.R. constitution and law, but it doesn't always work out that way.

"From a situation of equality, the young wife lands in a family in which her husband and her in-laws frequently expect her to voluntarily assume the duties of a servant and do all the housework," Victor Perevedentsev, Russia's best-known social researcher, wrote recently in the Literary Gazette.

He said Russian men average about a 50-hour work week, but the wife works about 80 hours on the job and at home.

"Today's young wife as a rule cannot put up with this," he said. "Women are rebelling. And of course they are correct in doing so.

"The husband and wife often determine domestic duties virtually in open combat."

'Unforgettable Scenes' in Japanese Western Film

By PHILIP FRENCH
London Observer

Noel Annan observed that one of E. M. Forster's greatest gifts was his ability to say fresh things about apparently hackneyed subjects like freedom and tolerance.

I was reminded of this while watching Dersu Uzala, a direct, honest movie version of the Russian military explorer Arsenyev's memoirs of his journeys through remote Eastern Siberia in 1902 and 1907 with the elderly Goldi hunter, Dersu Uzala, as guide — because Akira Kurosawa's film manages to speak freshly to us about friendship, social responsibility, freedom and a whole nexus of things concerning man's relationship to his environment that have been buried under the verbiage of the ecology movement.

The triumph of Kurosawa's Rashomon at the 1951 Venice Festival was a cultural event comparable with Commodore Perry's arrival in Japan just 100 years before. A new world of cinema was opened up. But more than that, a generation conditioned by wartime propaganda to believe that the Japanese were a race of indistinguishable sadistic barbarians was suddenly faced with a movie so subtle, so reasonable, so deeply humane, so immediately accessible, that it was shocked into examining all its prejudices.

Kurosawa's historic role and universal appeal assure him a place above the customary fray of critical debate. And the range of his accomplishment — Japanese versions of Shakespeare, Dostoevsky, Gorky, Ed McBain, Samurai films influenced by westerns (then bought to be remade as cowboy pictures), a profound movie about death (Living), launching the career of Japan's greatest film star Toshiro Mifune — give him a central place in world cinema.

I've always wanted Kurosawa to make a western (and so has he), and his latest film, made in Russia in 1975, could easily have been one. The relationship between the civilized European intellectual Arsenyev and the Asian frontiersman Uzala resembles that between the pioneers and the Indians, in Fenimore Cooper's novels: the picture's style and mood recall the elegiac quality of the late John Ford.

Dersu Uzala has all the conventional attractions of the best westerns — awe-inspiring landscapes seen in their various seasonal guises, comradeship forged in the face of shared hazards, an awareness of the attractions of nature and the consolations of society, the clarification of moral and metaphysical problems through their physical isolation. The one attribute it deliberately eschews, however, is violent action — when a gang of Chinese bandits appear in the jungle the task of pursuing them is left by Arsenyev's topographical survey team to local villagers.

There are scenes of unforgettable moral beauty in this picture — Arsenyev's noting that Uzala cares for strangers he'll never meet, an encounter with a grieving Chinese ancient living in a mental world of his own.

Star Fighters Draw Up Battle Lines

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The forces of 20th Century-Fox are facing those of Universal studios in a U.S. District Court battle over Star Wars.

Fox contends in a federal suit that Universal's forthcoming ABC television series, Battle Star Galactica, infringes upon its copyright of Star Wars, the most profitable movie of all time.

The movie, first released on May 25, 1977, has grossed more than $216 million in the United States and Canada.

Fox seeks an injunction to bar MCA, its subsidiary Universal, and ABC from broadcasting the weekly series in September.

ABC plans to broadcast a three-hour movie opening the Galactica space adventure series and follow it with a two-part show before going into the weekly series. Universal has said it will release the movie theatrically in other countries.

The Fox suit filed last Friday contends that "the defendants MCA and Universal have copied the Galactica feature from plaintiff 20th Century's copyrighted photoplay Star Wars." It asks the court to stop the theatrical release of the movie and the TV series.

Galactica has been touted as ABC's big new hit of the season. The three-hour movie cost a reported $7 million and the weekly budget has been reported as $1 million, which would be a record for television.

The space adventure stars Lorne Greene, Richard Hatch, Dirk Benedict, Maren Jensen, Terry Carter, Herb Jefferson Jr. and Noah Hathaway. It was created by Glen Larson, who serves as executive producer.

The producer is John Dykstra, who won an Academy Award as supervisor of special photographic effects for Star Wars. His company, Industrial Light and Magic, did the special effects for Star Wars.

Universal has not replied to the Fox suit, but production is continuing on the ABC series.

Today's Caroline's Day

MONTE CARLO, Monaco — After celebrating until the early hours with 600 friends, Princess Caroline and her commoner bridegroom Philippe Junot marry late today at a civil ceremony attended by 40 relatives.

The civil ceremony will take place in the royal palace's small chapel, and Caroline and Junot will return there Thursday morning for a Roman Catholic nuptial mass attended by 100 guests, including members of Parisian society and the international jet set, ex-royalty and vintage movie stars.

NEW YORK — A Bronx man has been awarded a certificate of heroism, a free five-year subway and bus pass, and a maroon tie with the official seal of the city, because he thinks people are "entitled to ride without fear."

"Few people have your kind of courage; you didn't look away," Mayor Edward Koch told James Harris, 30, as he presented the awards Tuesday at City Hall.

Harris, an ex-marine, was riding on a southbound subway train May 30 when a man brandishing a knife demanded that the 50 passengers turn over their money to him.

"I watched the men sit there doing nothing," Harris said. "One man actually pushed a woman out of the way in an effort to escape."

"I felt I had to do something, so I said 'Hand me the knife and give the money back,' and he realized I meant what I said."

ELIZABETH, N.J. — The big day was ushered in with a big greeting which can still can be seen from miles around.

The greeting on the 8,000-gallon oil tank reads: "Congratulations on Your Wedding, Nunzio and Ginger."

"I just had to do it," said Donald Lutz, who operates a tank installation firm here.

"Nunzio has been a friend of mine for as long as I can remember," Lutz said.

PARIS — Neighbors of batchelor Emile Castel, 57, were worried when there was no sign of life from his home—so they called the police.

Castel was found locked in the bathroom where he had been for three days and nights.

"The door jammed and I couldn't move it," an embarrassed but relieved Castel told his recuers.

WASHINGTON — The U.S. Senate rejected a proposal Tuesday to deny former President Richard Nixon $251,625 in annual government pensions and office expenses. The vote was 89-2.

Sen. James Abourezk, (Dem.—S.D.) said it was unfair for a man who refused to testify in the Watergate cover-up trial in 1974 to continue to receive a government pension.

OTTAWA — Prime Minister Trudeau will attend the opening of the Calgary Stampede July 7 following a two-day visit to Vancouver, his office announced Tuesday.

A statement said Trudeau will fly to Vancouver in a transport department Jetstar July 5 and will make a speech before the joint Vancouver Mens' and Womens' Canadian Clubs at the Hotel Vancouver July 6.

The statement said he will arrive in Calgary that evening and will return to Ottawa on Saturday July 8.

TORONTO — Pop singer Tom Jones broke an O'Keefe Centre record for a single performer during his run last week with ticket sales grossing $335,214.

The previous record was set in 1974 by Engelbert Humperdinck, another pop singer with sales of $180,000.

This was the second time Jones has broken the house record. During his first performance run in 1974, ticket sales were a record $178,000 until Humperdinck set the record a short while later.

Driver's Revenge: Ticketing Police

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — It was only fair.

A week ago Larry Dean Hardison received a ticket for parking illegally.

So he wasn't about to ignore the downtown scene Tuesday — 19 police cars standing in a no-parking zone outside a hotel where a seminar on homocide was being held.

Getting out pen and paper, Hardison prepared 19 "Dear Officer" letters.

"Dear Officer: One of the best ways to lose the respect of citizens is to break the rules which you enforce. You are parked illegally."

He signed his name and placed his telephone number on each note.

Hardison said a few minutes later he received a phone call from Police Chief James Parsons.

"He said he had parked illegally and he apologized," Hardison said. "I was delighted that he called. If the police officers had been there on official business it would have been all right, but they weren't and there were parking lots available."

FLUSHED WITH MONEY

FREDERICKSBURG, Va. (AP) — A judge has ruled that $3,780 in cash clogging a toilet drain at the late Farid Salem's shoe shop here belongs to Salem's widow.

A plumber was called to clear the drain by the man who bought the shop after Salem's death in November 1976.

The plumber, the new owner of the shoe shop and Mrs. Salem had claimed the cash.

$1M Tip Sobering

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. (AP) — Joseph Baudette says he may have imbibed a lot of liquor at Kilmead's Tavern, but he never intended to give the bartender a $1-million tip.

The tip — in the form of a lottery ticket that is worth anywhere from $10,000 to $1 million — was blocked by a temporary restraining order by Justice George Beisheim of New York state Supreme Court.

Baudette, 22, says he gave Clifford Bice a state baseball lottery ticket and told the 26-year-old part-time bartender at the Manhasset tavern to "scratch off the number; you may be lucky for me."

"We'll split if we win."

Bice has a different version. He says he got it as a tip, and that when he scratched the card, the words "Grand Slam" came up. That means the ticket is worth a minimum of $10,000.

LONDON HONORS LAWRIE WALLACE

The man who steered B.C. and its capital through more centennial celebrations than most of us can remember has received a high honor from a city with somewhat longer history and traditions than Victoria.

Lawrie Wallace, B.C.'s Agent-General in Britain and Europe, has been made a Freeman of the City of London.

The honor, usually reserved for London's own citizens in recognition of some notable deed or long and meritorious service, was bestowed on him at a June 21 ceremony in the Guildhall by John Griggs, Chamberlain of the City of London.

Wallace, a former deputy provincial secretary, received the award for his associations with several lord mayors of London during their visits to B.C. over the past 25 years.

MINIATURE ARMED FORCES DAY SATURDAY

Third Battalion, Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry, will exercise its freedom of the city of Victoria on Saturday.

The ceremony is at 11 a.m. on the lawn of the Legislative Buildings, complete with a feu de joie.

Mayor Mike Young will take the salute on a dais opposite City Hall.

The freedom of the city stems from the middle ages when cities were separate political states and did not trust troops within their gates. To give a regiment freedom of the city meant the soldiers were had the trust of the city.

The PPCLI battalion has the freedom of the city of Victoria and Esquimalt, allowing it to march through the streets with "bayonets fixed and colors flying."

Commanding officer Lt.-Col. Keith Corbould says the day's activities have been arranged "for ourselves, the city and the retired Princess Pats still living on the island."

Among the honor guests at the luncheon to follow at Work Point Barracks will be Lady Patricia Brabourne, the regiment's colonel-in-chief.

Corbould said that because of spring training at Wainwright, Alta., the battalion is unable to take a major part in Canadian Armed Forces Day so Saturday will be a miniature Canadian Armed Forces Day for the battalion.

The gates will be open to the public at 1:30 p.m. for an open house which will include static displays of military equipment and a grandstand show at 3 p.m.

"We're trying to make certain it's interesting, fun and exciting," Corbould said. "We want to make the ladies scream and the kids laugh."

The grandstand show will include rapelling from helicopters, teams competing in death slides from two 60-foot towers, mock air attacks on the barracks by two CF5 tactical fighters from Cold Lake, Alta., and culminate in a miniature mock battle.

Accompanying Lady Brabourne from Britain will be her husband, well-known film producer John Brabourne, who produced such movies as Sink the Bismarck.

On Friday the Brabournes will watch the fleet regatta in the dockyard of CFB Esquimalt and Lady Brabourne will attend a regimental dinner at Work Point that evening.

On Saturday formal balls will be held in the officers, sergeants and junior ranks' messes at Work Point. On Sunday the Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry Association will hold its annual meeting there.

Lottery Ads Out of Hand, Mair, Backbencher Agree

Consumer and Corporate Affairs Minister Rafe Mair will ask governments to tone down lottery advertising.

Mair promised action after Vancouver South Socred MLA Stephen Rogers complained about federal and provincial agencies which use excessive advertising "in flogging lottery tickets and these dream chances."

Rogers said the advertising has become nauseous.

Mair was in full agreement: "Not only because I happen to be personally very much against lotteries as a matter of principle, but because I agree with the member, I would be very pleased to acceed to his request."

Rogers said outside the house if governments tone down their campaigns, then maybe fewer people would get "sucked in."

The Western Express lottery spent $1.4 million in advertising last year with nearly 40 per cent used in B.C.

The Provincial spent just over $1 million on advertising with 36.7 per cent for promotion in B.C.

Another Socred backbencher — George Mussallem of Dewdney — says the government should stop all lotteries because sooner or later organized crime will get into it.

MUST-TIP RESTAURANTS MUST TIP OFF PATRONS

Restaurants which add an automatic service charge must warn their customers in advance of the extra expense, Consumer and Corporate Affairs Minister Rafe Mair said Tuesday.

Mair said there is nothing illegal about the practice, although it seems contrary to the spirit of tipping.

However, the minister added, under the Trade Practices Act, it is deceptive to withhold a material fact in a consumer transaction.

The minister said consumers have complained that some Victoria and Vancouver restaurants are levying a 10 to 15 per cent surcharge without disclosure before the meal is ordered.

Restaurant owners who adopt this practice must display a sign in a prominent place on their premises or include a conspicuous notice on their menus.

The Liquor Control Board prohibits compulsory charges from being added to customer's bills.

Summer Festival Still On

The Victoria Symphony's summer festival will go ahead despite a $40,000 deficit expected this year.

A move Tuesday by Oak Bay Ald. Shirley Dowell to cancel the festival failed because contracts have already been signed with the musicians.

Acting chairman Miobael Field, at a board meeting, told her it would cost $50,000 not to hold the festival.

Attempts last month by symphony president Peter Lovric and members of the exective to drop the festival were unsuccessful when other board members, including Dowell, endorsed the festival.

The provincial government will not contribute money for festival expenses, even though Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy indicated she likes the idea, Dowell said Tuesday.

Two of three core municipalities have also refused additional financial support.

Dowell said recreation and conservation ministry officials informed her the symphony can now charge for its summer concerts and still be eligible for provincial grants.

The board agreed to look at the option of charging for the concerts, which have been free in the past.

Cost-cutting measures have reduced the symphony's operating deficit by $9,000 to $107,000, Field said.

He said most of the deficit is the result of over-hiring of musicians for certain concerts.

Negotiations are under way to retire the deficit through a bank loan amortized over five years, Field said.

The loan will have to be retired through special projects rather than general revenues.

Glenlyon Presents 46th Awards

Lieutenant-Governor Henry Bell-Irving was the guest of honor at Glenlyon school's 46th annual awards ceremony recently.

The major award winners from the graduating class were Philippe Moreau, best all-round boy and winner of the scholarship cup; and Michael Stamford, who was presented the character and conduct shield.

Citizenship awards were presented to Brian Charlesworth, elementary level; Mark Williams, Stephen Rhone, Chris Burke and Matthew Lurie, primary level.

BCDC Notes Mixed Year

The B.C. Development Corporation reported a mixed year for the 12 months ended March 31, with a doubling of assets offset by only a marginal increase in retained earnings.

The annual report of the Crown corporation, set up under the former NDP administration to encourage economic development in the province, said the value of loans approved increased by more than 400 per cent over the previous fiscal year.

BCDC reported assets of $49.2 million at the end of the fiscal, compared with $29.2 million at the end of the previous year.

Included in this total were $10.2 million in loans to industrial enterprises, $25 million in land and development projects and $2.6 million in leased properties.

There were $8 million in outstanding loans at the end of the previous year, while value of projects totalled $13.1 million and value of leased properties amounted to $247,000.

Cash and short-term deposits totalled $10.4 million at year end, compared with $7 million the previous year. Retained earnings were $779,932, compared with $777,094 in 1976-77.

BCDC said the disappointing profit performance was due primarily to delays in obtaining municipal approvals necessary to place the Delta industrial park on the market.

Devaluation of land held by the corporation in Prince Rupert also contributed to the low profit, the report said.

Speech, Hearing Jobs Vow

Health Minister Bob McClelland said Tuesday the government and the University of B.C. will co-operate to provide more jobs in the ministry for audiology and speech science graduates.

Graduates of the program complained earlier this year that many positions in the ministry's division of speech and hearing were being filled by Americans, leaving UBC-trained persons unemployed.

A committee set up by McClelland reported that the problem arose because of a lack of communication regarding training standards.

McClelland said he will recommend funding be made available to allow two senior students from UBC to acquire clinical experience within the government's speech and hearing program.

"This will be a pilot project which, if successful, could be broadened in the future and open government facilities to UBC to assist in providing more practical training to their grads," he said in a news release.

Bennett Firmly Opposed to Trudeau's New Senate

VANCOUVER (CP) — Premier Bill Bennett has told Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau that the federal government's approach to constitutional reform doesn't reflect provincial concerns and threatens co-operation between the federal government and the provinces.

In a letter made public today, Bennett said Trudeau's proposal to re-organize the Senate into a new House of Federation is "fraught with difficulties."

The letter is the premier's first public statement on the proposed constitutional review since Trudeau introduced the Constitution of Canada Act in Parliament June 20.

Bennett said he regrets that Trudeau's approach in introducing the legislation has not reflected any federal-provincial co-operation.

"It is with considerable regret, therefore, that with no prior consultation with the provinces, the federal government has seen fit to proceed with its proposals on the constitution in the form of a bill before Parliament.

"Such a technique seems to belie a great deal of understanding that I thought was emerging between us."

Bennett also criticized the proposal for the establishment of a House of Federation.

"I fear that your appointment mechanism will result in a myriad of partisan allegiances, with regional interests being left very much in the background," he said.

Bennett said that the letter is only his first response and that he generally welcomes action on constitutional reform.

Bennett said that if the new constitution is not the result of full consultation between the federal and provincial governments, it may be a futile exercise with the final document gaining little support across the country.

Bennett also said that recognition of B.C. as the fifth region in Canada for the purposes of full regional representation in the central institutions of federalism is essential and will remain the cornerstone of B.C. proposals.

RELATIONS ACT UNOPPOSED

The legislature gave unopposed third and final reading Tuesday to the new Family Relations Act only hours after Jack Kempf (SC—Omineca) said in an interview he opposed its passage.

Kempf remained silent in the house as the legislature gave the bill quick approval in principle, committee approval and third reading.

He had said he and several other government backbenchers wanted passage of the bill delayed until next year so it could be studied in greater depth.

When asked why he didn't voice his objection during debate in the house and vote against the bill's passage, he said: "When it's a fait accompli, what's the purpose?"

"I am concerned about the government getting too involved in the everyday lives of our citizens," Kempf said. "I want to make sure that this very crucial legislation is in fact what the people of B.C. want."

On a related matter, Gary Lauk (NDP—Vancouver Centre) introduced a private member's bill in the house calling for enshrinement of children's rights.

NDP Bill Taxes Hydro

Rossland-Trail NDP MLA Chris D'Arcy introduced a private member's bill Tuesday that would make B.C. Hydro pay the equivalent of full property taxes on hydro-electric power installations.

Private member's bills invariably die on the order paper.

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

During the 1975 National Championships, I phoned in a report to my home paper, the Washington Post, every day. I was always dictating the daily story to a lady who was not a bridge player. One day, after I had finished, the lady at the other end said: "Fine, Mr. Karpin, but what's a finesse?" I replied: "It's a situation where you take a chance and 50 per cent of the time you'll be right." Said the lady: "Those are much better odds than I'm used to. Maybe I should take up the game."

Neither side vulnerable. North deals.

The bidding:

2 ♡	Pass	4 ♡	Pass

Opening lead: Queen of ♠.

She was looking at the bright side, of course, for when one takes a finesse, 50 per cent of the time she is wrong. Today's deal serves as a case in point.

After the opening spade lead had been taken by South's ace, declarer cashed the king of trumps, after which he returned a trump towards dummy's A-J. But he did not finesse the jack (had he done so, East would have won the trick with the queen and played back a trump. The four-heart contract would then have been defeated). Instead he won the second trump lead with dummy's ace, leaving only the high queen of trumps outstanding.

Next came a low club, South putting up the king, with West capturing the trick with his ace. West returned the diamond queen, which was taken by dummy's king. The board's remaining club was then led, South winning with his queen, and returning a club which he ruffed with dummy's jack. East overruffed with the queen.

East exited with his last diamond, the trick being won by dummy's ace. Next came the jack of spades, which was taken by East's king. With nothing but spades left in his hand, East had no option but to play a spade (the nine) to dummy's high ten. On this trick South discarded his remaining low club. South's only losers were a spade, a club, and a trump.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forecast for Wednesday, June 28

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Cycle high — accent on home, gifts, crucial decisions, diplomacy, improved domestic circumstances. Taurus, Libra, Scorpio persons figure prominently. One who adores you says so, breaks the ice and your digestion improves as result.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Subtle approach brings results. Be discreet, show that you can keep a secret. Be cheerful if visiting one confined to home, hospital. Pisces, Virgo individuals are part of scenario. See Places, people as they are — avoid self-deception. Element of mystery should be enjoyed, not feared.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Accent on affection, creativity, self-esteem, love. Wish comes true — accept responsibility that accompanies it. Emotions dominate. However, there is room for logic — and an accounting. Avoid extravagance, take nothing for granted. Capricorn has plenty to say, much is pertinent.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Aim toward goal. Refuse to be sidetracked by minor incidents, annoyances. Finish what you start. Refuse to be intimidated by one who gestures, speaks loudly, wrings hands and sings the blues. Superior will grant you recognition.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Reading, writing, communication, educational and creative projects dominate. Talents will not be permitted to lie fallow; lethargy is hit with a knockout punch. You are on way to making yourself seen and heard—pioneering concept is most likely to succeed.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Restrictions, blocks, obstacles, financial reevalution are on agenda. You learn to work with material at hand. Partner, mate will aid in getting the most for money. Exchange of confidences brings you closer to important person in your life.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Leave details for another time; this is your day for grasping overall view, checking legal aspects, being a vigilant observer and listening to suggestions from others, especially partner or mate. Sense of humor is ally. You are not "stuck." You survive and win!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Accent on service, health, employment; steady routine, pace enables you to succeed. Steer away from sensationalism. Persons who depend upon you could make unusual requests. Maintain balance — and be guided by past experience and common sense.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Lunar aspect coincides with significant changes, fulfillment where emotions are concerned. Creative capabilities surge forward. Gemini, Virgo persons are in picture. You are complimented on appearance, vitality. Yes, love is part of scenario!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Home, security, property values and taxes — these dominate. Family needs, practical issues, vacation pleasure and budget command attention. Taurus, Libra, Scorpio persons figure prominently. Review material. Become familiar with subtle nuances — someone may try to "surprise" you.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Arguments could be "full of holes." Know it and don't be awed or intimidated by reputations, traditions. Adhere to your own principles. Many now make empty promises. Obligations should be verified in writing. Message will become crystal clear.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Emotions, possessions, money commingle — cycle moves up and adventure is on horizon. Capricorn, Cancer persons figure prominently — so does the number 8. Your presence is felt; you gain more authority and will have added responsibility.

IF JUNE 28 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY . . . you are creative, stubborn, attractive, original and an incurable romantic. December will be one of your most significant months of 1978, a year high-lighted by change, variety, travel, intensified relationship. If single, you could marry. If married, there might be an addition to family. Leo, Aquarius persons play important roles in your life. Major domestic adjustment occurs in October.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

"I figured out something on our new phone number," said George. "The 4-digit part, that is."

Linda looked up from her book. She does't dig figures the way her husband does. "Okay, let's have it."

"You could show more interest," George chuckled. "If you multiply its digits you get seventy times their sum, and it's the smallest 4-figure number that works that way."

What was the number?

(Answer tomorrow)

Yesterday's answer: SORRY was 12559.

Man Jailed 3½ Years For Raping Samaritan

A man who raped and unlawfully confined a 45-year-old married woman who went to his aid last November was sentenced in Victoria county court Tuesday to a maximum 3½ years in jail.

Timothy Charles John Alexander Findlay, 21, pleaded guilty to both charges before Judge E.J.C. Stewart.

Findlay will spend two years less a day definite and 18 months indefinite in a young offenders' unit.

Stewart said he was unable to see much in the way of mitigation because drink and drugs were involved.

The judge said he did not doubt the remorse and conversion referred to by counsel for the accused man, but he saw a risk of repetition.

Crown counsel Peter Birkett told the court Findlay fell several times trying to get over a wall in downtown Victoria about 10 p.m. on Nov. 18, and the passing woman went to his assistance.

After being helped, Findlay went over to the woman's car, struck her and forced her to sit in the passenger seat while he drove.

The vehicle ended up in a ditch near a farm in outlying Victoria.

The victim was attacked and held for five to six hours before the accused man left her and hitch-hiked back to town.

She was cut and badly bruised on the face, neck, side and legs when found by police at about 7:30 a.m.

Counsel Mel Hunt said the accused has had psychological problems since childhood and had made efforts to get help. On the afternoon of the offence he had been using hashish and had also been drinking heavily until shortly before meeting the woman.

Before the Judge

Judge Blake Allan Tuesday found a 71-year-old man guilty of making harassing telephone calls to Esquimalt police on Sept. 22.

John Morrison, 1110 Greenwood, was fined $100 following a provincial court trial during which a civilian dispatcher and Esquimalt police officer testified they received about 20 calls from Morrison over about 90 minutes.

Morrison testified the calls were about kids playing on the roadway, contrary to municipal bylaws.

In making his judgment, Allan said Morrison used the police as a tool in a quarrel with neighbors in this case, and ruled it was Morrison's intention to harass the neighbors.

Allan reminded Morrison of the story of the boy who called wolf too often and cautioned him not to bother police with nuisance calls if he wants them to attend for a real emergency.

Judge D.K. McAdam sentenced a 34-year-old man to two years less a day following a trial on a charge of breaking and entering.

Richard William Smith, 2014 Fernwood, was convicted last week but sentencing was delayed.

Smith was convicted of breaking into a residence at 323 Skinner and taking stereo equipment and between 200 and 300 records with a total value of about $4,000.

Smith's criminal history included convictions for breaking and entering on Dec. 13, 1971, when he was given a six-month sentence, on Oct. 11, 1974, when he was handed a two-year term, and on Nov. 30, 1974, when he got another two-year term.

A 23-year-old escaper from Wilkinson Road jail received six more months after pleading guilty to two counts of false pretences and one count of being unlawfully at large.

John Daniel Joseph Deroche was charged with passing a worthless cheque in the amount of $467.25 Monday to A.N.C. Equipment Ltd., 1885 Fort, and attempting to cash a worthless cheque for $52.50 later that day at Carousel Gifts Ltd., 1801 Fort.

Crown counsel Don Laughton told Ostler a clerk at the gift shop became suspicious and called Victoria city police.

Laughton also told the court Deroche was serving a nine-month term for breaking and entering Jan. 9 and was due for release Aug. 20 when he failed to return from a temporary absence pass issued to him Sunday for socialization.

Ostler gave Deroche a three-month, concurrent term for the two false pretences convictions but ordered they be served after his present sentence for breaking and entering is completed, and gave him a further three months consecutive to all other sentences for the unlawfully-at-large conviction.

A charge of possession of a chain saw obtained by false pretences was dropped against Deroche but 17-year-old Mitchell Hector Laroux, 2120 Ridge, was jointly charged with Deroche and pleaded guilty to it.

Laughton said the saw was recovered by police at Laroux' mother's residence.

Ostler suspended sentence on Laroux, placed him on six months' probation and ordered him to perform 50 hours of community service work.

Ostler fined an 18-year-old and ordered him to perform 50 hours of community service work after he pleaded guilty to causing wilful damage to 50 plants in a flower bed at 2316 Cook on June 15.

Court was informed Roger Singh, 1188 Bay, was upset following an argument with a girlfriend and, at 4 a.m., tore out the flowers in a fit of anger. Laughton said Singh was arrested by Victoria city police a short distance away with dirt on his hands and face.

"Aren't you a little worried you would react that way to emotional distress?" asked Ostler.

"No," replied Singh, who was also placed on six months probation and ordered to pay damages estimated at $45 by the owner of the flowers.

Insulation Selling Permits

QUEBEC (CP) — The Quebec consumer affairs department announced Tuesday that all travelling salesmen for insulation products will soon have to carry permits from the province's consumer protection office.

Salesmen for doors, windows and house siding already must have permits.

The department said in a statement that such a permit is no guarantee of honesty or of quality of materials sold, but requires posting of a bond which protects consumers.

Under the law, any contract of more than $25 may be cancelled by the purchaser within five days of its signing.

Lighter Terms Urged in U.K.

LONDON (AP) — A general review of British prison sentences, calling for greatly reduced terms and more judicial elbow room, was made public Tuesday and is expected to inspire controversy between police and liberal politicians.

The report asks that the maximum penalty of life imprisonment for rape, kidnapping, hijacking and causing bodily injury by explosions be cut to seven years.

Life imprisonment for murder and manslaughter would remain in force but would be the maximum penalty, not the mandatory sentence judges now are required to impose.

The House of Commons abolished the death penalty in 1969.

The report is the first official review of maximum prison sentences since 1840. It was submitted to Home Secretary Merlyn Rees by the Advisory Council of the Penal System, a committee of penal and judicial experts that has been working on the report since 1975.

The report is concerned only with sentences in Crown courts, where juries decide major criminal cases. It does not deal with magistrate courts, where magistrates decide less serious criminal cases without a jury.

Its aim was to bring penalties more into line with sentences actually imposed in recent years. The council said its findings were based on nine out of 10 jail sentences passed in Crown courts from 1974 to 1976.

Britain's Police Federation chairman Jim Jardine was quick to criticize the report.

"It looks like this is another way to be more lenient with criminals and this is certainly against our policy," said Jardine.

Everyday goodness.

Good Time for Perennials

The end of June is a good time to sow seeds of flowering perennials. Warmth and long days aid both germination and growth resulting in a sturdy root system to withstand the hazards of winter.

Since the plants will not give their first blooms until late spring or early summer, according to their kind, results will not be immediately known.

However, as a general guide, bought seeds of perennial flowers can be relied on to produce varying numbers of useful garden plants. Those which are not hybrids are more likely to give plants with exactly the same habits and flowers as those already familiar to you.

Aquilegia (columbine) seeds labelled as mixed giants of the long-spurred strain will give a fine collection of colors. But seeds from named perennial phlox varieties are likely to revert to the type plant (a bluish mauve) or "species" from which the named varieties were selected. To get exact replicates, propagation is obtained by division of roots or by rooting cuttings of tip growths.

Russell lupins are a worthwhile strain to grow from seeds sown now. The tall compact spikes of bloom will come in a wide range, blue, rose, purple and perhaps buff shades.

For a long-lived perennial from seed try Buphthamum, which has neat green leaves and branched heads of many narrow petalled, orange daisy-like flowers. Only 12 inches tall, it makes a little hedge or can be grown in groups. It comes up fresh and green each spring. Flowering continues for most of the summer.

The sowing of perennial seeds at this season is done outdoors in a prepared, half-shaded spot where extra light shade can be applied and watering easily attended to.

Transplanting to at least two-inch spacing should be done when two pairs of true leaves have developed. In some cases, the young plants can remain thus until spring growth restarts.

An alternative is to transplant seedlings into a three-inch deep wood flat (or box), at three-inch spacing in good soil, to go into the shelter of a coldframe by late September to stay until spring planting-out into the garden is advisable.

This week I am finding that many seed outlets have had their seed packages withdrawn from sales racks which may result in difficulties in buying these perennial seeds.

However, farm and garden supply stores will still have stocks available as will certain local seed growers and florists.

For a large garden where good looking flowering perennials are wanted for color in quantity, the growing of one's own plants from seed is a rewardig experience. One learns much from handling the young plants through the first two years of growth.

Some will bloom during the first year so that undesirable colors can be discarded without further time waste. Others will take an extra year to build up a suitably strong root system for blooming. All along the way there are gardening lessons to enjoy in unfolding of leaf and flower from the time of germination of the seeds.

White Wins Race Case

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Supreme Court today ordered a California medical school to admit Allan Bakke, deciding that the school had illegally discriminated against him because he is white.

The court, in a splintered decision that yielded six separate opinions, ruled that the University of California's medical school at Davis is not barred from taking race into account in a future admissions program.

The decision appeared to rest on a 1964 federal law that outlaws racial discrimination by institutions receiving federal funds.

The medical school, which twice rejected Bakke's application, receives such funding.

The ruling was awaited anxiously by civil rights leaders and constitutional scholars who claimed it may be the court's most important edict on race relations since segregation was outlawed 24 years ago.

At stake, they said, may be the future role racial minorities play in the U.S. society as well as billions of dollars worth of programs in government, education and private business aimed at making up for past injustices.

Bakke successfully sued the university after his application to the university's medical school at Davis was rejected in 1973 and 1974.

He charged that the medical school's special admissions program, which reserved 16 of the 100 openings in each entering class for "disadvantaged" students, was an impermissible racial quota.

Bakke had contended that less academically qualified blacks, Hispanics and Asian-Americans were admitted ahead of him.

A state trial court had ruled that the special admissions program violated the Constitution's guarantee of equal protection and also the portion of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 that outlaws racial discrimination by institutions receiving federal funds.

The California Supreme Court had upheld the trial court's ruling in favor of Bakke on the constitutional grounds only, choosing to ignore the federal law question.

Richest Ever Swim Race

TORONTO (UPI) — Many people have tried to swim Lake Ontario over the years and some have succeeded, but when a field of up to 20 hopefuls enters the chilly waters near Niagara Falls Aug. 16, they will be competing for the biggest swimming purse ever offered.

The Pepsi-Cola company confirmed Friday it has invited 20 top marathon swimmers from eight countries to enter the 32-mile race from Niagara-On-The-Lake to the Canadian National Exhibition grounds in Toronto.

The CNE will co-sponsor the event.

Winner of the race — if there is one — will receive $25,000. An equal amount will be distributed among the other competitors.

A company spokesman said invitations went out to swimmers in Canada, the United States, Britain, Argentina, Egypt, Mexico, the Netherlands and Syria.

"This will be the richest swim race ever," he said. "We expect a new record will be set."

About a dozen swimmers have accepted the challenge, including Torontonian Kim Lumsdon, who was the 10th and last person to swim the lake, in 1976.

Also invited was Lumsdon's fellow Torontonian Cindy Nicholas, who holds the record for a Lake Ontario swim. Miss Nicholas accomplished her feat in 1974, when she touched the Toronto shore after swimming for 15 hours, 10 minutes.

The last and only Lake Ontario marathon swimming race was held in 1964, but rough weather caused its early cancellation and none of the contestants finished.

Recent marathon swims have started on the U.S. side of the lake, but organizers said immigration regulations led to the starting point being moved to Niagara-On-The-Lake, Ont.

Marilyn Bell, who was the first to swim the lake, was expected to attend a press conference formally announcing the event later in the week.

Lawyer Sleeping With Jail Fugitive

VANCOUVER (CP) — Patricia Colleen Connor, a lawyer charged with harboring an escaped prisoner, shared her bed with the fugitive while he was at large, county court was told.

Connor, 27, also is charged with possession of a stolen pistol.

Russell Elliott, a prisoner at the Lower Mainland Regional Correctional Centre in Burnaby, escaped from custody in July, 1977, when a guard was held at knifepoint in a washroom at the Vancouver General Hospital.

Elliott was recaptured Sept. 9 when police staked out a residence in the 3,000-block of West Second Avenue in Vancouver. Elliott was felled by a shotgun blast from police.

RCMP Corporal Howard Johnston testified earlier that Connor arrived moments after the shooting and said she was just going to turn in Elliott.

CONNOR

Rhonda Hewitt, Elliott's sister, testified Monday that Elliott and Connor visited her home in Penticton near the end of July, 1977, and they shared a bed and bedroom. Hewitt said she did not know then that Elliott was an escaped prisoner.

Lawrence Westfall, who lived with Hewitt, told the court that it was not until RCMP visited him later in September that he learned his pistol and gun registration certificate were missing.

Hewitt rejected the suggestion under cross examination that Westfall had given Elliott the pistol.

Detective George Barclay earlier testified that Connor and Elliott had lived together in Vancouver 18 months ago and police found fingerprints from both in the West Second apartment.

The trial continues.

Johnston Won't Run As Fed President

VANCOUVER (CP) — George Johnston, president of the British Columbia Federation of Labor, announced today he will not seek re-election at the federation's annual convention in November.

At that time, the presidency will become a full-time paid position.

Johnston, 61, a member of the federation executive for 18 years, has served as president for the past 18 years.

Johnston said in a news release he had intended to run but feels the duties of the full-time presidency can be better filled by a younger person who can run for more than one term.

He said, however, he will remain active in the labor movement and in January will be running for re-election for the full-time position of secretary of the Meat Cutters Union, a post he has held for 35 years.

Guide Given Free Rights

VANCOUVER (CP) — A northern British Columbia guide said he was awarded rights to an area near Dease Lake for free in 1970 after reminding a top government official that "he'd be looked after" for keeping quiet about an apparent scandal.

John Holmes told the inquiry into licensing of guides and outfitters that he acquired the area, for which had earlier been ready to pay $10,000, after he reminded Dr. James Hatter, former head of the fish and wildlife branch, of the promise.

Holmes said that he had promised to keep quiet about a meeting called after he had threatened to expose manipulation of guiding territories by branch officials.

The inquiry, headed by Judge J. L. McCarthy, was told that the complicated issue began with the proposed sale of guiding territory near Dease Lake in the 1960s.

Holmes had arranged to buy rights to the land, but the transfer was blocked by a local fish and wildlife branch official.

Holmes was later taken to a meeting in Prince George after he threatened to expose manipulation by branch officials. Holmes testified that during that meeting, attended by then conservation minister Ken Kiernan, a dispute arose after which one man stormed out saying "I've obviously been paying the wrong people."

PARA PRESIDENT BACKS NURSES

VANCOUVER (CP) — The practice of assigning unqualified nurses to work in special care units at Vancouver General Hospital may compromise patient care, Dr. Don Stark, president of the Professional Association of Residents and Internes of British Columbia (PARA), said Tuesday.

In a letter to VGH chairman Milton Wong supporting the nurses concerns about patient care, Stark said nurses in special care units should have proper orientation and general duty nurses working as temporary relief staff in special care areas are unsuitable replacements.

He said a permanent solution to long-standing problems between nurses and administration could be achieved through the establishment of a department of nursing at a senior administrative level.

PARA represents about 350 hospital house staff in British Columbia teaching hospitals.

DROWNING PROBE SET

KAMLOOPS (CP) — An inquest has been called into the death of an eight-year-old city boy drowned Monday during an elementary school swimming class.

RCMP Sgt. Ted Jones said Cameron Roberts drowned despite the fact that two lifeguards, two teachers and three parents were supervising 31 students in a 25-metre outdoor pool.

L. J. Fowles, principal of Bert Edwards elementary school, said the Grade 3 student was with classmates at a local community centre pool when the incident occurred.

Tsitika Airing Urged

Public hearings to discuss the logging plan for the Tsitika watershed should be held in Victoria and Vancouver, a spokesman for an environmental coalition group stated Tuesday.

In an open letter to the provincial government's Tsitika planning body, David Orton said if hearings aren't held in the two cities the Federation of B.C. Naturalists will organize such a meeting in Vancouver.

"Let us have maximum, not minimum discussion of the serious issues in contention for forest management in the Tsitika," Orton said.

Orton said Northern Vancouver Island residents are not the only ones interested in the fate of the Tsitika, the last unlogged watershed on the Island's east coast.

He said decisions made on logging practices to be applied in the Tsitika will have province-wide implications, setting precedents for future resource use conflicts elsewhere in B.C.

Orton's group represents the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union, the Federation of B.C. Naturalists, Sierra Club of Western Canada, Outdoor Club of Victoria, Environmental Committee of the Victoria Labor Council, the Federation of Mountain Clubs of B.C. and the Mt. Douglas High School Students' Committee.

H-Commital by Court Answers Bar's Beef

The government moved Tuesday to appease critics of its controveral plan for compulsory treatment of heroin addicts by putting the power to commit addicts to the plan into the hands of the court system.

Health Minister Bob McClelland said amendments to the Heroin Treatment Act should satisfy objections raised by the Canadian Bar Association, civil libertarians and doctors throughout the province.

About 100 protestors peacefully paraded in front of the legislature steps Tuesday noon in a demonstration against the heroin act.

The protestors were unable to see McClelland.

"McClelland's proposal is like Hitler's final solution to the Jewish problem," a press release from the committee said.

The amendments change a contentious part of the bill which gave the power of committal to a government-appointed director acting on the recommendation of a panel of experts.

Under the changes, the Supreme Court of B.C. will handle the final commitment order, acting on the recommendation of the director, McClelland said.

The minister said doctors have indicated they were willing to serve on evaluation panels, but were hesitant to commit someone to compulsory treatment.

Legal spokesmen have said the original plan was a denial of due process and was in possible contravention of the Canadian Constitution.

McClelland said those objections should now be erased.

He also explained that if a suspect is deemed to be an addict by the review panel, he may still enter the program voluntarily.

Liberal leader Gordon Gibson and Conservative leader Vic Stephens — who had both stated opposition to the bill in the past — voted late Tuesday along with the government majority to give approval in principle to the bill by a margin of 28 to 16.

However, the NDP voted against second reading, saying the amendments do nothing to change the main impetus of the bill, which is to force addicts to undergo treatment, something the party says will be a costly failure.

But McClelland says the government had little choice but to go ahead with the plan, as all other attempts to control the province's burgeoning heroin addict population have failed.

The province, he pointed

Cambodia Initiative Reported

BANGKOK (AP) — Vietnamese forces using tanks and planes have launched a new push into neighboring Cambodia and may have penetrated up to 60 kilometres into the territory of its onetime Communist ally, Thai and U.S. military analysts said today.

The sources were uncertain whether the operation — said to involve as many as 70,000 Vietnamese troops on both sides of the border — was aimed at eliminating Cambodian frontier bases or bringing down the government in Phnom Penh.

Thai military sources said a Vietnamese move against Kampong Cham would signal that the operation was aimed at more than sweeping the border.

Northern Gas Pipe Start Possible By 1979

CALGARY (CP) — Construction of the $10-billion Alaska Highway natural-gas pipeline could begin as early as 1979 or 1980 if the projects' proponents get their way, Mitchell Sharp, northern pipeline agency commissioner, said Tuesday.

The agency is to co-ordinate construction of the pipeline through Canada, setting both terms and conditions of construction.

The multi-billion dollar project is expected to give a sharp boost to the Canadian economy and to help lower the high Canadian unemployment rate.

Sharp told a news conference that construction on the massive project might begin before the 1981 target date if "everything went as the people sponsoring the project wanted them to."

Foothills Pipelines Ltd. of Calgary is proposing to build the Canadian portion of the pipeline, which would carry natural gas from Alaska to the lower 48 states.

Last week, Graham Pollock, executive president of Foothills (South Yukon) Ltd., said there might be a delay of between three and four months in the start of construction of the 5,900-kilometre (3,685-mile) pipeline.

He said Foothills originally planned to start construction Jan. 1, 1981, but that date might be postponed to April or May.

But Sharp said he feels the agency must allow the project to proceed without undue delay.

Sharp said the agency will hold public hearings this fall in several northern communities. "They will be hearings, not an inquiry like justice (Thomas) Berger held," he said.

Berger, a justice of the B.C. Supreme Court, conducted his inquiry for two years throughout the Mackenzie River Valley, then held sessions across Canada.

Berger recommended no gas pipeline be built across the Mackenzie Delta for 10 years until native land claims were settled.

Sharp said the hearings would allow northerners to express their views on terms and conditions placed on the pipeline, but it would not be a forum for land claims.

He said once the pipeline was under construction, the agency might be expected to deal with such claims as damage to traplines but it would not deal with land claims as such.

Sharp said the final draft of terms and conditions governing pipeline construction should be out by January or February, 1979.

PETRO-CANADA QUITS BIDDING

CALGARY (CP) — Petro-Canada announced today it has ended efforts to acquire ownership of Husky Oil Ltd., a United States company with substantial interests in heavy oil deposits near LLoydminster on the Alberta-Saskatchewan border.

The federal oil and gas corporation said in a statement the decision to drop its plans to buy Husky came after it was announced Tuesday that Alberta Gas Trunk Line Co., a Canadian firm, had acquired 35 per cent of Husky's common shares.

The Alberta Gas acquisition gives the Calgary-based company the majority of Husky common shares.

In its statement, Petro-Canada said it originally offered to buy Husky because it wanted to accelerate development of the heavy oil deposits near Lloydminster, on the Alberta-Saskatchewan border.

"With a substantial position now being acqired by a Canadian company sensitive to the underlying motivation of its original announced intentions, Petro-Canada will direct its attentions to other activities of priority," the company said.

Tuesday, Alberta Gas announced that it owned 3.8 million Husky shares. Husky chairman Glenn Neilson and president James Nielson hold about 25 per cent of the company's shares while the Mormon Church has about eight per cent.

Chain of Parents Protests Crossing

ABOUT 70 parents and children blocked traffic for about 20 minutes this morning at West Saanich Road and Wallace Drive to protest unsafe conditions for children crossing the intersection on their way to the Brentwood elementary school. The parents have been trying for several months to have a traffic light installed at the intersection. So far, despite petitions, letters and phone calls, nothing has been done. The demonstration started at 8 a.m. and ended after police asked the protestors, who walked in a continuous chain blocking all traffic on both roads, to move on. Pamphlets were handed to motorists asking them to share the parents' concern by writing to Mayor Jean Butler and demanding action. "The municipality, although sympathetic, advises us they have done all they can to expedite matters," the pamphlet reads. "(However), we feel the safety of our children and the public in general cannot be left in jeopardy any longer."

SHIP SPEWS FUEL OIL

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — A fuel tank on a Japanese vessel ruptured and poured out at least 65,000 gallons of heavy fuel oil into the Columbia River this morning, the Coast Guard said.

The motor vessel Toyota Maru No. 10, an auto carrier, was taken to Terminal 6 on the Columbia as officials attempted to stem the ruptured tank, which still was leaking about 4,000 gallons an hour this morning, the Coast Guard reported.

The oil slick extended about 45 kilometres down the Columbia from Kelly Point, the Coast Guard said.

TWO MEN DROWN IN SHAWNIGAN LAKE

A 28-year-old Colwood man died Tuesday in an unsuccessful bid to save a companion from drowning in Shawnigan Lake.

The bodies of Dwayne Donald Forrest, of 2582 Wentwich, and Robin Lintott-Dyck, 26, of St. Charles Apartments, Gorge Road, Victoria, were found by police divers in 15 feet of water about 40 feet off-shore.

A Shawnigan Lake RCMP spokesman said the pair and another man, James Walker, 23, of Cobble Hill, were spending the day at a cottage on the west arm of the lake near 2715 West Shawnigan Lake Road.

The tragedy occurred when Lintott-Dyck went swimming about 4:30 p.m. and got into difficulty.

He called for help and Forrest, despite being a poor swimmer, went to his aid. But as Forrest reached him, Lintott-Dyck went under and was lost from sight.

Walker, who is also a poor swimmer, attempted to help but had to turn back to shore.

Walker told police Forrest stayed in the water, and when he next looked, Forrest also had disappeared.

Walker used a boat in an unsuccessful search then returned to get help.

Police divers located the bodies at 6:40 p.m.

"No one could fault the men for their bravery," he said. "But none of them were very good swimmers and I think it was a case of lack of respect for water.

COLA Trips Beer Talks

Contract talks between B.C. breweries and union employees broke off Tuesday after the two sides couldn't agree on a cost-of-living allowance (COLA) clause.

A spokesman for the Canadian Union of United Brewery, Flour, Cereal, Soft Drink and Distillery Workers said no future talks have been set, and the next move is up to the companies.

John Langley said the union will take the latest offer by the Brewery Employers Labor Relations Association to the membership at Molson's Vancouver brewery for a vote, but added the negotiating committee is recommending rejection.

The association said in a statement it presented the union with two new offers Tuesday which represent the highest wages and working conditions in the North American brewing industry.

It said that one and two-year offers made in negotiations would mean a $9.58 per hour basic wage for a machine operator on ratification of a contract, increasing to $10.05 on April 1, 1979.

In addition, the companies offered a lump-sum cost-of-living allowance payment to all regular employees and other improvments to existing wages and benfits.

The union has been on strike against Carling O'Keefe in Vancouver since last month. It was locked out at Molson's, Labatt's in New Westminster and Victoria, as well as the Columbia brewery in Creston June 8.

Meanwhile, a picket outside Labatt's New Westminster brewery was jumped by guard dogs Tuesday night.

New Westminster police said the dogs, guarding a warehouse full of beer at the brewery, went after Jordon Blatter, 29, of Maple Ridge. Blatter's injuries were slight and he returned to the line after receiving a tetanus shot in hospital, police said.

Goyer: Ici On Parle Francais

OTTAWA (CP) — Ottawa civil servants working in nearby Hull, Que., should speak French to local merchants and citizens, says Supply and Services Minister Jean-Pierre Goyer.

Speaking Tuesday at the official opening of Place du Portage Phase III, Goyer told several thousand of his department's employees that now that they are working on the Quebec side of the Ottawa River they should do as the Quebecois do.

"The majority of the people here are expecting that we speak French to them and if we make an effort it will show that this region really is a bilingual national capital area that can set an example for the rest of the country."

Goyer spoke in French.

150 Homeless as Tornado Stabs Que. Village

BUCKINGHAM, Que. (CP) — Mayor Reginald Scullion has declared a state of emergency for the Buckingham-Masson area hit by a tornado that injured 36 people and left more than 150 homeless Tuesday.

Scullion said he will seek federal and provincial aid for residents for what some have estimated is $2 million in damage.

"This is an emergency, there's no doubt about it," he said. "The area has been hit by the worst disaster we've ever seen."

Scullion said he is concerned that insurance may not cover "an act of God like this."

The injuries were minor — ranging from broken bones to cuts and shock.

The storm wiped out 40 homes in a new subdivision and damaged 25 other homes in the Masson village district of this pulp-and-paper town of 2,000 about 30 kilometers northeast of Ottawa.

One resident said "everything went grey" about five minutes before the storm hit at about 5:15 p.m.

Police said there was some advance notice of the storm and local radio stations carried warnings, so many residents headed to their basements. But others were trapped between collapsed walls.

The injured were taken to hospital in central Buckingham, about five kilometres away from where the storm hit the hardest. Doctors arrived from outlying areas to help treat the victims.

Some of the homeless were put up in a local hockey arena, the town hall and the local branch of the Royal Canadian legion.

Wayne Ouellette, 25, a paperworker, described how the storm hit his neighborhood.

"My wife and I had just finished supper when the wind started," he said. "I got up to close the window but before I could, the glass shattered all over me."

"I ran upstairs to close the windows up there and when I looked out I saw two houses start to fall down.

"I saw two cars flying through the air and one of them landed on a house."

Ouellette said his house was one of the least damaged, "so a lot of the neighbors came over here."

"I didn't want to leave," said Ouellette. "It's not that I don't trust the people of Masson, but I've got a lot of good furniture there"

Police were crusing the damaged areas late Tuesday, watching for looters.

Hours after the destruction, in muggy, post-storm weather, the town centre was crowded with townsfolks and outsiders.

Officials estimated the wind reached speeds of 180 kilometres an hour.

A hurricane is a storm with winds gusting over 120 kilometres an hour. A tornado has even stronger winds and causes more damage.

The damage was confined to two areas, one about five blocks square and the other smaller.

The Silver Lining In Antiques

By HUMPHRY DAVY
Times Staff

Collecting antique Canadian silver is a fascinating hobby — and one of the most profitable around — but it isn't easy to acquire top-flight articles these days.

Tara Nanavati, Provincial Museum museologist and one of Canada's top authorities on silverware made in this country, says: "Any person who started collecting 10 years ago, is a wealthy individual today.

"A silver letter opener which sold for $150 10 years ago is now claiming $700 and more."

And she says apart from rising costs, top-grade articles are now scarce.

But despite her knowledge of silver and the chances she's had to collect antiques, Nanavati doesn't have any Canadian silverware.

"I would rather see it collected by museums and displayed for everyone to see and enjoy," she says.

Nanavati is in charge of the mangnificent antique silver collection belonging to the Henry Birks Company which goes on display at the museum on Thursday.

The collection — 168 pieces in all — will be on view in the modern history division's temporary exhibit gallery on the third floor.

It will be on display until next Jan. 15.

The exhibition is the first of its kind in Western Canada and it incorporates pieces from the 1700s to the 1940s.

It includes church silver, mostly from Quebec as well as some Indian articles.

"The display follows the lines of Canadian history, starting off with the French influence in the 1700s, the transition from French to British rule and the development of the Maritimes," she said.

The collection includes some outstanding pieces by Francois Ranvoyze (1739-1819), whose works are considered as oustanding as those of European silversmith of that period.

The exhibit which Nanavati considers one of the most unique is an old bible in leather with a silver crucifix and clasps mounted on the leather.

"You seldom see silver mounted on leather," she explained.

She said one problem in collecting antique Canadian silverware is that articles didn't have official hallmarks until 1906. But the standard of workmanship is high.

Henry Birks launched the collection in 1936.

"Unfortunately, he found that many fine examples of early Canadian silver had been lost forever having been consigned to the melting pot," she said.

Timber Trades Eyed

By HUMPHRY DAVY
Times Staff

Timber trade-offs may be necessary to compensate the multi-national forest companies for loss of timber rights on public lands in the proposed third phase of Pacific Rim National Park, Recreation and Conservation Minister Sam Bawlf has indicated.

Bawlf sent a letter on the controversial issue to Liberal leader Gordon Gibson who released it today.

The third phase of the park includes the Bamfield peninsula, the West Coast Trail and three Nitinat Lakes yet to be designated as parklands.

"Forest companies with valid entitlements on land within the new boundaries may require compensation, possibly by substitution of forest values elsewhere," Bawlf said in his first statement on the subject since he became a cabinet minister two years ago.

The matter of timber tenures arose when both government agreed to enlarge the proposed park boundaries to include the three Nitinat lakes in the park, he said.

But the minister gives no indication when he will take steps to designate the boundary of the West Coast Trail.

He states in his letter a forest inventory and valuation of the land in question is nearly completed.

The figures will enable the provincial government to consider with Parks Canada the proposed changes to the boundary, Bawlf said.

Gibson, a strong supporter of the trail between Port Renfrew and Bamfield, has been pressing the Social Credit government for information on the progres being made on including the coastal land strip and three lakes in the park.

Trail supporters have been waiting for eight years for the province to turn over the land to Parks Canada, as promised in the original agreement between Ottawa and B.C. Logging companies have always opposed the proposal.

Meanwhile, Robert Nixon, executive director of the Sierra Club, said a move is afoot to organize a Save the West Coast Trail Committee in the event the provincial government attempts to back away from the agreement.

The committee will have representatives from the mainland and Vancouver Island citizen groups, he said.

"Apart from the thousands of sympathizers, we have the support of more than 50,000 people who have been on the trail. We will seek financial support.

"The government has promised the trail and lakes would be included in the park, but for one reason or another, has been dragging its feet — doing nothing to designate the boundaries. It's one excuse after another," Nixon said.

He noted the new Forest Act will make it more difficult for the province to acquire the land.

Under the old act, he said, the government had the means to obtain the land without compensation.

"The new act virtually places public lands under the complete control of multi-national companies. It makes them that much more powerful."

'Follow Own Advice' On Industrial Park

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

Saanich Ald. Dave Paterson said today he believes Saanich council is doing the wrong thing in committing itself to a $585,000 land purchase without knowing whether the proposed use for the property will ever be realized.

Paterson was referring to council's decision Monday at an in-camera meeting to buy more than 100 acres of Crown land on Interurban Road from the B.C. Development Corporation, as part of a land banking scheme to establish an industrial park.

The decision was not unanimous and Paterson confirmed that he was one of the aldermen who voted against the motion.

He said he firmly believes an industrial park is needed, but council should approach the planning in a more careful and rational way.

He said his chief objection is that council is ignoring the fundamental advice it gives to every developer: never assume that everything is going to go through smoothly.

Saanich advice to developers has been to complete all necessary studies, secure options on the land in question and then approach the municipality. Only once rezoning has been obtained should they exercise their options to purchase the land.

"We tell them, don't give us a sob story that you have invested thousands of dollars; it's a buyer beware situation. Yet now we're not following our own advice," Paterson said.

He said there is a "host of hurdles" to clear before the industrial park proposal becomes reality, and council should have taken options on the land rather than plunge into outright purchase — whether it was a good deal or not.

"I really do believe the mayor (Mayor Mel Couvelier) is in reckless pursuit of this one-shot deal and he has got this great pie-in-the-sky profit he is hoping to realize," Paterson added.

"That may come about and if it does, God bless him, he deserves full credit for it. But we've been accused before of backroom planning and you're seeing a classic example of it now."

LEGAL AID FOR SUSPECT

A 40-year-old farm laborer was charged in Victoria provincial court Tuesday with second-degree murder.

Avtar Singh Gill, address not given, appeared before Judge William Ostler, who read the charge in connection with the death Monday morning of 55-year-old Joseph Pelkey of the West Saanich Indian Reserve.

The incident allegedly happened at 8:30 a.m. at a Central Saanich farm owned by Tom Michell. Pelkey died at 4:36 p.m. at Royal Jubilee Hospital from a stab wound in the chest.

Gill, through an interpreter, told Ostler he had no lawyer and said he wanted to be released.

Ostler said the court had no authority to deal with bail in murder charges, and remanded Gill until this morning so a legal aid lawyer can be arranged.

Saanich Seeks Aid To Buy Gorge Land

Saanich officials were instructed Tuesday night to investigate all possible funding sources — particularly government financing — for $1.6 million to acquire a nine-acre waterfront property which adjoins the present park at Gorge and Tillicum.

The land in question is the site of the former San Sebastian Motel and Victoria Motor Court, and was to have been developed under a land-use contract as a 261-unit apartment complex.

But the project was first delayed because Saanich couldn't provide sewers in time and now, apparently, the plans for the development have been either stalled indefinitely or abandoned and the site is up for sale.

Terry Farmer, spokesman for 76 Developments, the group of Victoria businessmen behind the scheme, confirmed this week that the property is available for $1,650,000, after it was decided to put the project "in limbo" until conditions in the housing market improved.

Municipal planner Gil Laurenson said in a lyrical report to council's planning committee that the delay "could be likened to an invitation through fate's intervention, to the decision-makers and citizens of the entire region to do something to ensure its preservation."

But Saanich couldn't afford the asking price and efforts to obtain funds from trusts and foundations had met with no success, he said.

Laurenson claimed the Gorge property has as much significance to the region generally as Victoria's Inner Harbor "upon which so much public money is being lavished."

Stand-Off Develops On Marina Project

Proponents and opponents of a marina expansion and possible housing development at Tsehum Harbor were equally matched at a public information meeting at Parkland Secondary School in North Saanich Tuesday night.

About 200 persons attended the meeting called by North Saanich advisory planning commission to review a proposal submitted by Bob Wright of North Saanich Marina Ltd. involving 37 acres between Tsehum Inlet and Blue Heron Basin.

Both sides got loud applause with opponents arguing the development would irreparably alter the area's natural state, and the development's defenders pointing out there is a pressing need for more moorage facilities in the municipality.

Adrien Gilmore, chairman of the APC, told the audience no formal development application has been placed before council.

Victoria lawyer Louis Lindholm, representing Wright, said his client asks nothing more than a fair judgment on what he believes to be a fair proposal.

Lindholm noted Wright is prepared to dedicate 12 acres as a nature sanctuary and added the municipality will also be offered first option to purchase 15 more acres over a three-year period.

The proposal includes expanding the existing Bosun's Marina from 350 berths to about 600 berths and a housing development involving roughly 120 homes on 15 acres for a maximum density of eight units per acre.

Lindholm said the marina expansion would generate about $50,000 in tax revenue for the municipality.

Doctor Hurt

A Saanich doctor is in fair condition in Royal Jubilee Hospital after his car went off the road and slammed into a tree near the entrance to Mount Douglas Park Tuesday night.

Police said Dr. John Neville, 59, of 1662 Barksdale Drive, received head and chest injuries in the mishap which occurred at 8:47 p.m.

Neville was alone in the car and travelling north along Cordova Bay Road at the time.

Youth Takes a Whirl at Hunt for Canadian Identity

It's all vastly different from the radical, often violent, winds of change that blew through the 60s.

Yet when 22 young people from the far-flung corners of this great nation arrived in Victoria last Friday, they came seeking change, too. And new friends of a different culture. And perhaps this is the way to go about it, after all.

From Ontario, Quebec and even as far away as Nova Scotia and the Northwest Territories they came and when they leave this Friday they'll each take a Victoria student back home with them for a week.

The quest for change and the search for the elusive Canadian identity during a two and-a-half-day weekend seminar lent a new twist to the YM-YWCA's Visions national exchange program, which is supported by the federal Secretary of State Department's travel fund.

I went down to the Y Monday morning to listen in while moderator David Wolsk and co-ordinators Corey Gibson and Maureen Mark staged the seminar's windup session where each of the five study groups presented their reports and recommendations.

Very interesting, too.

"Basically, we were studying Canadian identity and taking a closer look at the B.C. region," Gibson told me. "The most remarkable thing to show up was the great pride all these young people have in the areas from where they come. But they are very regional. They all know their own regions well but few knew anything about B.C. when they came here."

Aged 15 to 22, their recommendations for change are idealistic.

"Our group decided French should be taught from kindergarten up with total immersion," explained Diana Holokowski of Victoria. "And that there should be more emphasis on Canadian history in education.

"In culture we discussed the drain to the United States and decided there should be more funding for Canadian drama and more Canadian content in the media.

"We concluded that it was very hard to pin down just what Canadian identity is because of the diversity of the resources and the people," Diana said. "In fact, one of Canada's main resources is its diversity."

But not all the students agreed on that one.

"We do have an identity but we don't seem to know what it is," suggested Eva Sennewald of Victoria, the leader of another study group. "The rest of the world knows we have a Canadian identity but we can't find it. We're feeling down on ourselves right now because of the Quebec problem and so it should be resolved as soon as possible."

And the way to resolve it?

"We all agreed," said Eva, "that Quebec should not separate. And that we should all learn French for our own benefit and not to make Quebec happy."

Other supremely idealistic suggestions included one that media coverage should be more evenly spread across the country instead of concentrating always on Ontario and Quebec, and that industry should be more Canadian-owned.

"Americans should have their say, but Canadians should make the decisions," said Eva.

Listening in on the final morning's discussion were several guests, including Jesse Dillard, regional liaison officer for the Secretary of State Department, who told the young people that another key problem they might have discussed was the effect on unemployment of technology.

Chamber of Commerce president Brian Small felt the students might have gone more into the decentralization of federal power and the shifting of decision-making to the provinces, which he termed one of the main questions facing Canada today.

But Small also said the concept of the seminar was exciting.

"Your exercise here is a very interesting experiment . . . and I'm really impressed with your recommendations," he told the students.

It was a valuable learning experience, too, said Angus Shaw of Victoria.

"I've learned a lot through this," he said. "It's a chance to meet other young Canadians and something we need. I no longer believe Nova Scotia is a fish town and I think there are visitors here who no longer believe all of us in British Columbia are lumberjacks!"

Marjorie Tugak of NWT and Cathy Mayzes of Victoria

And even outside the seminar the young visitors and their hosts are learning things in their first week of the exchange.

"So many things are different here," Marjorie Tugak of Rankin Inlet in the Northwest Territories, told me with wide eyes. "Like the weather, the trees and all the people."

"Yes, I'm really looking forward to going to Rankin Inlet with Marjorie," her Victoria host Cathy Mayzes said with a big grin.

"Some of the things she asks me are so weird that I can't always think of answers. Things you never think about; and it never occurs to you that perhaps some people have never seen these things.

"Like, when she first arrived she stopped and stared and asked 'How do they paint those lines in the middle of the road?' "

Geordie Robertson scores for the Cougars

Jack Shupe's Forecast

Coach's View

After my first year with the Victoria Cougars, my thoughts and views for the up-coming season have to be looked at with great anticipation. I am proud of the club's performance, especially during the final weeks of the regular season and the playoffs when the pressure was on. It is tough on all team members to withstand the long tough grind of the gruelling schedule and during the playoffs tensions run high, but our boys did very well.

This season we have several things going for us. We have two of the top centres in the league, Geordie Robertson and Garry Lupul returning to the Cougars for '78-'79. Also, goalie Kevin Eastman, and defencemen Mark Robinson and Scott Lang return to the Cougars this season and with the addition of Barry Pederson, a top rated centre from the Nanaimo Clippers, I'm sure we'll have a strong nucleus for our defensive line.

To round out our '78-'79 team we need two defensemen and three or four wingers. We are looking at the possibility of getting Greg Adams and Torrie Robertson, two wingers from the Nanaimo Clippers on this years Cougars. Defenseman Shawn Lynes, who played with the Richmond Sockeyes last year, will be a welcome addition to our defensive team.

I'm really looking forward to the '78-'79 season. I feel we have an exciting team and will have a good chance of representing Victoria in the '79 Memorial Cup.

Cougars In Good Shape, says Ernie Fedoruk, Victoria Times.

What's in store for Victoria Cougars during the 1978-1979 Western Canada Hockey League season?

Well, if coach Jack Shupe can come up with a top-notch defenceman, or two, the future could be rosy.

Graduating from the team that qualified for the playoffs in its final game of the regular season are goaltender Steve Amiss, centre Dennis Fenske, right winger Curt Fraser, defencemen Glen Cochrane, Kim Spencer and Leroy Heck, and overage winger Bill Jobson.

Presuming that one of the regular graduates may be back, one would have to suspect that the Cougars will be in good shape.

Shupe's main mid-summer worry is defence. Holdovers Mark Robinson, Scott Lang and Todd Morton give Shupe a good nucleus but it does seem obvious that the Cougars will need at least one more talented skater to play defence. The emphasis is on "at least" because there always is the possibility that Heck, Cochrane or Spencer could be back as the allowable overage player.

One of the prime candidates could be Shawn Lynes, an 18-year-old who played with Richmond Sockeyes last season. A pair of big youngsters—Shawn Bailer, 17, and Bob McGill, 16—showed up to impress Shupe at a rookie camp held in Edmonton this summer.

Shupe isn't neglecting backyard prospects. He's high on 16-year-old Brian Goodwin, who played with Saanich Braves in the Vancouver Island Junior "B" League last winter, and figures Tony Feltrin, 17, "has a chance." Feltrin performed with Nanaimo Clippers.

"I'm pleased with the prospects we have on our list," said Shupe. "It will depend on who wants to play badly enough. Desire may very well be the telling factor."

Kevin Eastman, who came out of Amiss' shadow to star for the Cougars in the playoffs, obviously is Shupe's No. 1 goaltender. The desire, confidence and talent he displayed in the playoffs indicates goaltending may not be a problem.

Nor does Shupe feel he has any great worries up front. Among the players ticketed to return are centres Geordie Robertson, Gary Lupul; wingers Bob Jansch, Sid Giroux, George Fritz, Mike Shields and Mickey Willgress. Plus which, centre Barry Pederson and left wingers Greg Adams and Torrey Robertson are being mentioned in "can't miss" tones when one looks to the farmhands expected to graduate from Nanaimo.

Cougars basically were a two-line team, offensively speaking, last year. With Robertson, Lupul and Pederson, it's obvious that Shupe has a good start on fielding a team with far greater scoring depth.

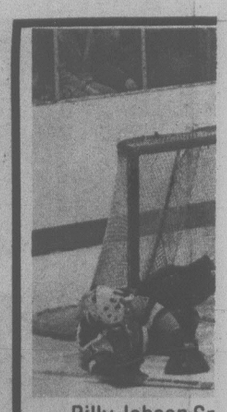

It may be needed because, once again, it looks as if Victoria, Seattle Breakers, Portland and the Memorial Cup champions from New Westminster are going to make the Western Division the tough one.

There could be some surprises. Shupe has looked over the South Island Junior "B" League very carefully. It sent Eastman and Lang to the Cougars last season, in mid-term, and Shupe hasn't forgotten. Also in the backyard is John Newberry, a forward who played with the Racquet Clup midgets last season. Newberry is only 16, but he's been invited to every Cougar training camp since he was 13.

One other strong candidate is Terry Sydoryk. From Edmonton, the 18-year-old could give Cougars a fourth centre of exceptional calibre.

Things can change. But on paper, in mid-summer, things "look good."

ROAD TRIPS THE BIG PLUS

by Stan Cooper, Daily Colonist

When Victoria Cougar fans mull over the 1977-78 season the conversation will almost certainly include "that road trip" and "the game in Seattle."

They're almost of equal merit because had the Cougars not set a team record for points on the trip and won the crucial Good Friday game against the Breakers in Seattle, the team may have been in another location today.

It's no secret that receipt from playoff games pulled the Cougars out of the red and gave the owners hope for another season here.

But enough of what might have happened—why were the road trip and the Seattle game so important?

When the Cougars left here for the nine-games-in-13-nights grind in late January, the team was fourth in the Western Division and had played six more games than the third-place Breakers, who held a three-point lead.

Following the trip, Cougars were second, two points up on Seattle and eight up on last-place New Westminster Bruins, although the Breakers and Bruins had games in hand. And the Cougars didn't drop more than two points below third place for the remainder of the season, snatching a playoff spot by winning their last three games.

Calgary Wranglers were the opposition for the trip opener, Jan. 27, and Cougars skated to a 6-5 win, Geordie Robertson scoring the winner with less than seven minutes to play. But it was a costly victory as the highscoring Robertson suffered a serious ankle injury and was sent home two days later.

Cougars moved on to Medicine Hat the following night and third-period goals by rookies Mike Shields and Mickey Willgress powered them to a 4-2 decision over the Tigers. But leftwinger Bill Jobson aggravated a shoulder injury and saw little service the rest of the trip, leaving manager-coach Jack Shupe with only 16 players, including two goalkeepers.

The weariness was evident in Calgary the next afternoon in a 2-2 tie with the Wranglers and it took a 45-stop effort by goalkeeper Steve Amiss to salvage the point.

The lanky redhead from Quesnel was equally sharp two nights later in Saskatoon, where the Cougars took their trip record to 3-0-1 by scoring three times in the final period for a 7-4 win over the Blades. Amiss made 37 saves and blanked Saskatoon for the final 23 minutes.

The good fortune followed the club to Lethbridge the next night when Amiss made 32 saves and rookie George Fritz scored twice in a 7-4 victory over the Broncos.

And the team moved past Seattle into second place on Friday, Feb. 3 by scoring the last two goals in a 7-5 decision over Regina Pats. The win balanced their record at 21-21-8 after 50 games.

The bubble burst two days later in Saskatoon where the Blades scored the last four goals for a 6-3 win.

Besides losing to Saskatoon, Cougars then had to struggle through a Saskatchewan blizzard to make the long haul to Billings for back-to-back games against the Bighorns.

It was in the Montana city that Amiss enjoyed his finest games of the season, facing 102 shots and turning back 99 of them to help his team to 3-2 and 4-1 wins.

Amiss made 49 stops the first game and Dennis Fenske contributed a double short-handed goal and Amiss went one better the next night with 50 saves.

The 7-1-1 record and 15 points was one point more than the Cougars managed on their previous best trip to the prairies, a jaunt in the early part of the 1974-75 champoinship season.

While the sizzling performance on the road kept the Cougars in the chase for a playoff spot, they were in danger of finishing fourth up until Friday, March 24, three days before the Western Canada Hockey League schedule ended.

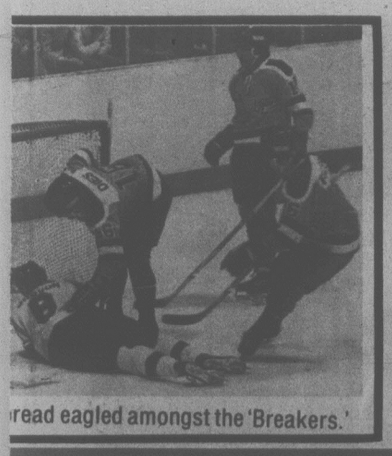

Trailing Seattle by three points with two games to play, Cougars needed two wins to assur themselves a playoff berth. And if they lost to Seattle, it was season over.

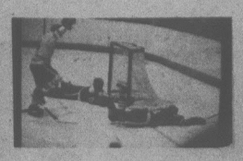

A large contingent of Victorians saw Robertson put the Cougars ahead at 1:40 but the lead was shortlived as Ryan Walter evened the score at three minutes. The big Seattle captain was in the penalty box when Robertson scored his 61st goal of the season later in the period and Leroy Heck made it 3-1 with a booming slapshot at 18:56.

Education A Priority

Cougars Display Good Attitude in Classroom

by Jim Leith

The average Victoria Cougar these days is more liable to end up with a mortarboard gracing his brow than a hockey helmet in the National League.

It's all part of a new program instituted by Jack Shupe in his first year as coach and general manager of the Cats and the serious intent of molding a well-rounded individual has caught a number of skeptics by surprise.

While Shupe has taken the whole thing in stride—he's been through it before—he has taken some of the more liberal administrators by surprise, administrators familiar only with the usual token verbiage to education for a junior hockey player.

Jack Lowther, principal of Mt. Douglas high school where several Cougars completed half-course loads this past term, says "I must admit I was a little skeptical at first.

"You tend to think that, with these kids, a future $200,000 salary is uppermost in their minds," adds Lowther, "and, in a question of priorities, an education would be pretty far down the list.

"But they have a good attitude. Maybe they realize they all won't get to play professionally and get that big salary so they want a high school education.

"That maturity is surprising for kids that age," he added.

It was the initiative of the hockey club that took Lowther by surprise and he says "It has to be the change in Cougar management.

"Their attitude is just completely different. I think most clubs promise their players a full education and I don't think they have any intention of carrying out the promises."

The Cougar plan is a variation of a program carried out by Shupe when he was the guiding light with the Medicine Hat Tigers.

And, while school administration may have been skeptical, the parents of the players have not and that, in itself, is a tribute to Shupe's reputation.

"A lot of clubs are half-hearted in their efforts at education," admits Shupe, "and some of them just don't care.

"It's been a tremendous success for us and we use it as far as our scouting goes and trying to interest kids into coming to our club."

"We talk to the boy and his parents and (education) is one of the first things asked. But they're not skeptical. It's spelled out to them and there are no doubts

The plan is a modified full-course plan which recognizes the difficulties a player would have in trying to tackle a full load of courses. Players take partial loads and those courses are given by special volunteer tutors who shape classes around the club's hectic Western Canada League schedule.

"Where they always made the mistake before," says Lowther, "was in trying to do the same old thing—making players try to complete courses while attending normal classes when they were in town and not at practice.

"That doesn't work unless the kid's an out-and-out brain," says Lowther, "we didn't even try to fit them into the ordinary program."

Instead, the players were put in charge of the tutors—Wilf Trapler, Tom Baldwin and Dave Harris—and allowed to work out their own individual regimens.

Four of the players completed graduation courses this year in courses that are nothing much more than directed reading programs with periodic examinations. The players are given certain reading assignments to cover while bouncing around in a bus or stretched out in a hotel room.

At home they spend time with the tutors after the normal 3:30 break from school for other students, or in the evenings.

Ironically enough, the method presents the players with more of an opportunity other students don't normally get. They have more opportunity for a one-on-one relationship with the tutor.

Shupe recapped, "It seemed that every kid who made it through the program, did so with better marks than if he hadn't played hockey and had stayed in school instead."

A 17-year-old Cougar defenseman, Mark Robinson agree, "We're lucky in a way. We can get more in five minutes from our instructors, because there's so few of us, than many students in ordinary classes can get in one hour."

The success of the program obviously benefits everyone and breaks down the barriers of prejudice against a sport that has not, in the past, paid much attention to a lad's needs other than those talents centred around a hockey stick and a pair of skates.

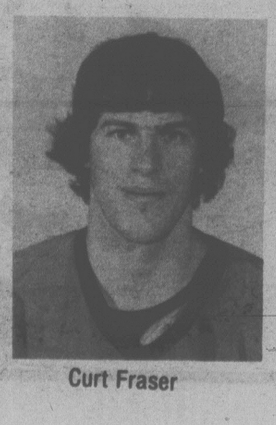

And besides, it's a giant stride when you can begin educating some of the educators.

THREE GO IN DRAFT

The N.H.L. Draft in the middle of June saw three Victoria Cougars selected. Left winger Curt Fraser was a second sound pick of the Vancouver Canucks while big defencemen Glen Cochrane and Kim Spencer went to the Philadelphia Flyers and the Minnesota North Stars respectively.

The Fraser Selection was no surprise. Curt had been touted as a top prospect all season long, although he admits to being a little dissapointed at his season showing.

Curt Fraser

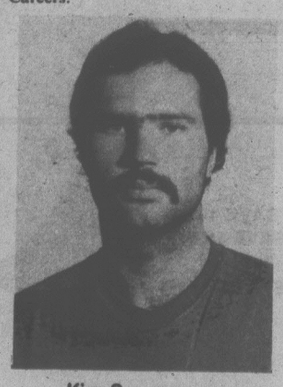

Glen Cochrane

Glen Cochrane, a steady performer all year, was never taken lightly by the scouts and his hard work paid off.

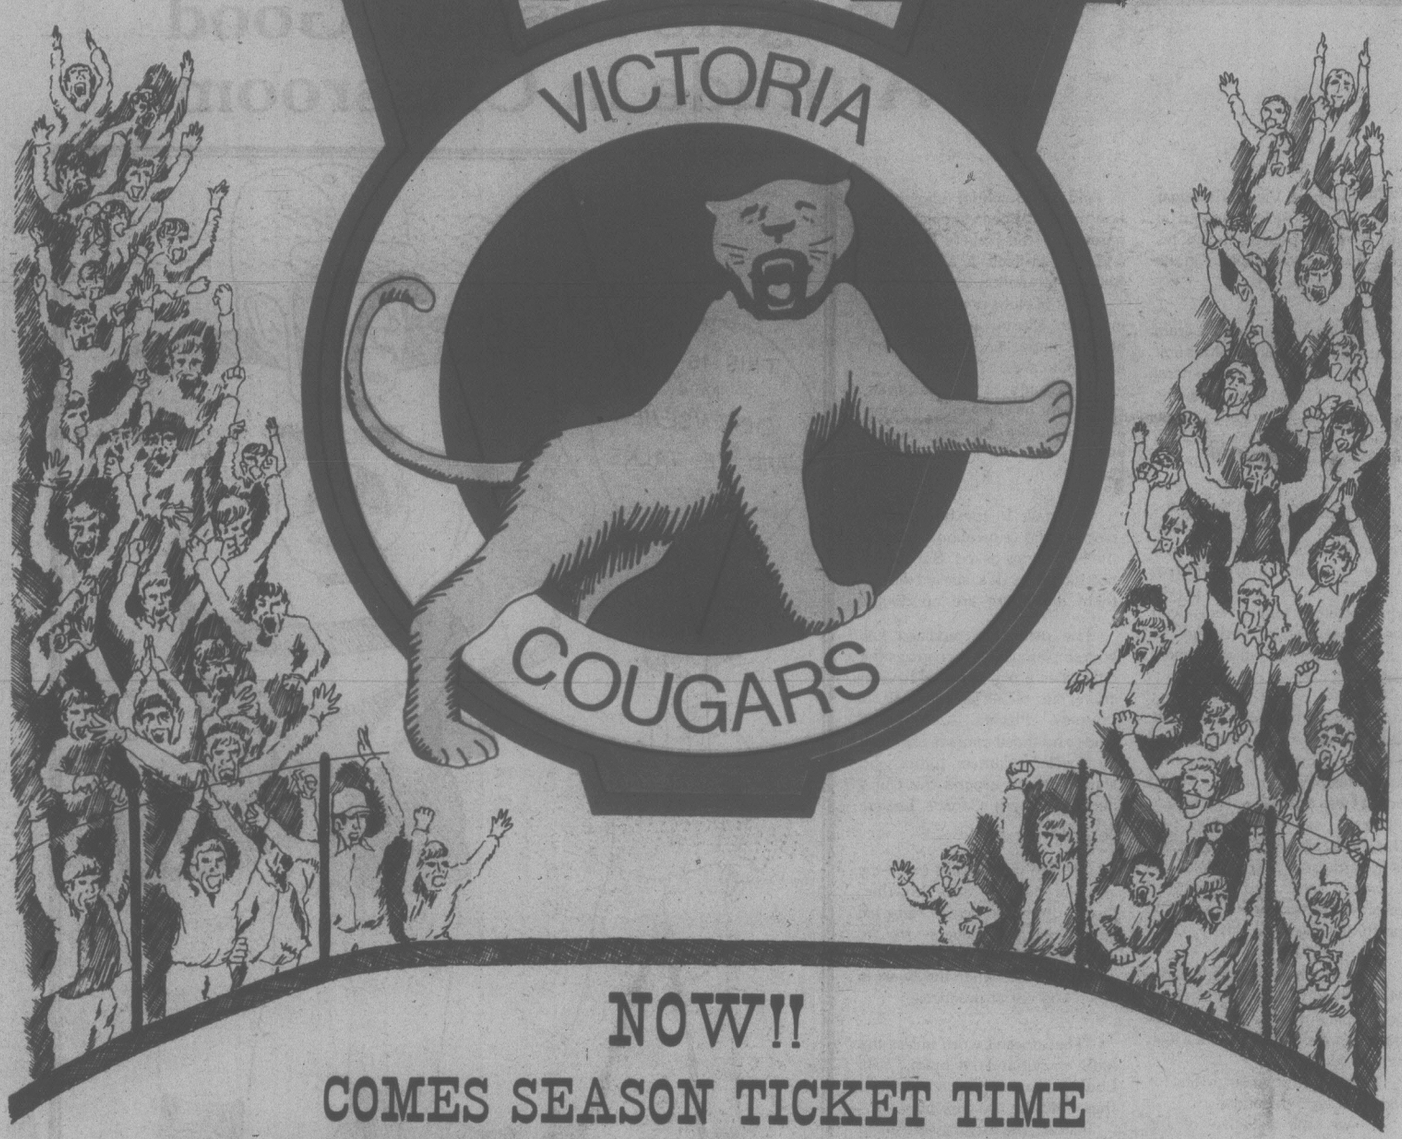

As for Kim Spencer, the stretch run had to be Kim's best. Off to a slow start, he impressed the North Stars in the late tough going.

We wish all three the best of luck in furthering their Hockey Careers.
